ROBBER MAKES FIRST VICTIM AID IN HOLDPS

Phone Company's Driver Kidnaped and Forced to Participate.

ANNAPOLIS OFFICERS FOILED IN PURSUIT

TWO STORES RIFLED AS VICTIMS WATCH

An armed robber kidnaped James A. Allen, a chauffeur for the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. yesterday and forced him to assist in two holdups on the Annapolis boulevard.

Allen, driving his captor on the foray, escaped a hail of buckshot fired by one of the victims at the automobile. In the escape two Annapolis policemen fired at the fleeing car, but none of the bullets hit the robber or his captive.

The chauffeur left this city shortly before noon to meet C. A. Robinson, vice president of the telephone company in Baltimore. Near Laurel, the robber jumped to the side of the machine and forced Allen to drive toward Annapolis.

The first holdup occurred at the general store of H. F. Besecker, at Arnold Station, five miles from Annapolis. The robber ordered Allen to purchase two packages of cigarettes.

The captive preceded him into the store. When the purchase was made Besecker was ordered to put his hands up. The bandit took $5 from the storekeeper.

Allen was then forced to drive the man toward Annapolis. At Dulls Corners the car was stopped. Allen was again forced to lead the robber into the store of Archie F. Dull, the proprietor of the general store.

Allen asked Mrs. Ellen Dull for a package of cigarettes. As she complied, the robber ordered the Dulls and Milton Sears, a driver for the Annapolis Dairy Co., to "put 'em up." He took $23 from Dull and $40 or $50 from Sears.

Car Dashes Past Police.

Meanwhile Besecker and Albert Barker had notified Sheriff Michael F. Carter of Anne Arundel County. Besecker and Barker came upon the car as the Dull hold-up was in progress. They were unarmed and witnessed the holdup from a safe distance.

Allen and the robber backed from the Dull store. Allen was slow in getting the car started, and Dull picked up a rifle and let both barrels go at the machine. The body of the car was peppered with shot and a window was broken.

Two Annapolis policemen, who had been notified by Sheriff Carter, waited at a crossroads for the robber to go through. As they passed the officers, a pursuit was started, with both policemen firing at the machine, which outdistanced them.

Pistol Pressed to Body.

With robber's pistol pressed against him, Allen was forced to drive to Baltimore, where the bandit left him at Calvert and Read streets. Upon leaving the machine the robber turned to Allen and said:

"Now you run along and let the police know what I did."

Allen went to the office of the telephone company, where he reported the affair. J. B. B. Boyle, assistant to the general manager, took him to police headquarters, where he told his story.

While the holdups were in progress, Allen said, he was constantly menaced by the gun in the hand of the holdup man.

When the license number of the holdup car was reported it was checked back here and fears were held for the safety of Allen and Mr. Robinson. It was thought that they might have met with foul play.

Allen lives at Bethesda, Md.

Foster Freed on Bond; New Lingle Clew Seen

Chicago, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Frankie Foster, the dapper gunman accused of slaying Alfred (Jake) Lingle, Tribune reporter, was freed on bond today when authorities discovered what they said was a new clew implicating another man as the killer.

Pat Roche, special investigator for the State's attorney's office, said he though the "actual killer" would be in custody within a fortnight. He inferred that he had been in communication with gangsters, who disclosed the hiding place of the assassin.

Calvin Coolidge

Says: The report that the railroads are to assume a more aggressive attitude in the assertion of their rights and the protection of their property is an encouraging development.

A generation ago the railroads were found to be interfering too much in governmental action which in no way concerned them. They were charged with being in politics when they should have been only in transportation. In reforming themselves, they went so far in the opposite direction that their business and, therefore, the public welfare have suffered.

Railroad representation has been able and wise, but under the present policy not always assertive. The important legislation of ten years ago came from the initiative of a voluntary association of savings banks and insurance companies holding railroad securities. If the railroads can now speak for themselves, it indicates a return of sane public confidence in transportation management which will benefit the country. Holding one-twentieth of the national wealth, the railroads can do more for the welfare of the wage earner, agriculture and industry than any other single agency. We do not want any return of railroad political activity but we do need such action as will protect their interests in legislation and regulation.

BERLIN POLICE MASS ON REICHSTAG'S EVE

Authorities Fear Renewal of Disorder That Marked October Session.

FINANCIAL REFORM ISSUE

Berlin, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Heavy forces of police were concentrated tonight in preparation for tomorrow's reconvening of the Reichstag, for the authorities are taking no chances of the disorder attending the fall opening being repeated.

When the Reichstag went into session October 13, freak from elections in which Fascists and Communists made wide gains, stormy scenes marked the proceedings inside and the rioters smashed windows outside.

Hence the police are taking nothing for granted tomorrow and strong forces of both foot and mounted police will be thrown around the Parliament building early in the afternoon.

President von Hindenburg yesterday signed decrees which placed the drastic Bruening financial program into effect as law of the land, and tomorrow's meeting is to determine what the legislative body will do about it.

The Reichstag could revoke the presidential decrees, but in view of Chancellor Heinrich Bruening's determination to set Germany's finances in order—with or without Parliament—that would be tantamount to daring him to enter an out-and-out dictatorship.

Social Democratic leaders already have indicated that their party is not inclined to help precipitate a dictatorship, hence the cabinet feels confident that its most outspoken enemies, the Fascists, Communists and Nationalists—will be unable to muster enough votes for revocation.

What would be the outcome of a nonconfidence motion against the Bruening regime is, however, another question. That would bring up the possibility of resignation of the cabinet.

Hence, there are three possibilities—approval by the Reichstag of the Hindenburg decree, which would mean approval of something in which the legislature did not participate; revocation, in which the chancellor might obtain presidential authority to dissolve the Reichstag and call new elections, thus bringing a temporary dictatorship, and a vote of nonconfidence, the outcome of which would be difficult to estimate.

BAR WILL DISCUSS REPEAL OF DRY ACT

MEET AT COSMOS CLUB

Prohibition—pro and con—has become such an outstanding issue that the District of Columbia Bar Association deems it worthy of consideration, having called a special meeting for tomorrow night, at which the question of repealing the eighteenth amendment, the Volstead act and the other enforcement and enabling acts will be discussed.

Announcement of the discussion came as a distinct surprise yesterday to Washington laymen. It was understood only members of the association were aware of the plan.

Officials of the association were not reticent about the meeting and its possibilities, but said no member of the newspaper profession would be admitted—that the session would be executive. This policy, Col. J. Miller Kenyon, president of the association, said is in line with the organization's rules.

It was understood that, in view of the significance of the topic, members of the association can speak to their heart's content at a closed session without fear of antagonizing "wets" or "drys."

Grahame H. Powell, an attorney, with offices in the Barr Building, introduced at a recent meeting, the resolution which will be discussed. The resolution is as follows:

"It is the sense of the Bar Association of the District of Columbia that the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution, the Volstead act, and all orders and regulations for the enforcement thereof, should be repealed, and the subject of prohibition be remitted to the sole regulation of the several States."

Col. Kenyon said he did not know who would sponsor the respective sides of the question. He had called the special meeting and it would be held at the Cosmos Club.

Col. Kenyon said the resolution was in line with similar subjects being considered by other bar associations and intimtaed the one which the local attorneys will consider has been acted on by the Boston association.

Full notice of the meeting is given in the Bar Association Bulletin, official publication of the District bar. The periodical says:

"The bar associations of several of 14-to-4 Decision Rejects Nov. 5, 1931, as Likely Period for Meeting.

BERNSTORFF CLAIMS 10 MONTHS SUFFICIENT

Gibson Would Have Experts Clarify Restrictions on Use of Poison Gas.

Geneva, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Completing tonight its task of drafting a general disarmament scheme for consideration by a world conference, the preparatory commission invited the council of the League of Nations to set a date for this momentous assembly of statesmen.

By a vote of 14 to 4, with numerous abstentions, including the United States, the commission rejected an effort by Germany to have the commission recommend the specific date of November 5, 1931.

Count von Bernstoff contended November 5 would provide ample time to prepare. He ridiculed the phrase "as soon as possible," and declared public opinion no longer would tolerate this expression.

Ten Months' Time Held Enough.

"Ten months," he cried, "is enough time in which to prepare for this conference. If ten months is not enough, then ten years will not be enough."

The German demand for a fixed date was backed up by China, Italy, Russia and Bulgaria. But Great Britain, France, Czechoslovakia, Greece and Japan vigorously insisted the commission would do well not to shoulder the heavy responsibility which they contended belonged only to the league council.

The amendment leaving it to the council to fix the date was offered by Lord Cecil, of Great Britain. The general belief in Geneva was the council would select some date early in 1932.

Use of Poison Gas Discussed.

A spirited discussion took place at today's session on the use of poison gas in warfare, but it finally was

The collision occurred 3,000 feet in the air. Lieuts. E. H. Underhill and Llewellyn Ryan came down safely with their parachutes. The planes were wrecked.

SENATE, REBUKING NYE QUIZ, SEATS DAVIS; HOOVER'S PLEA FOR IDLE GETS QUICK ACTION

VOTE OF 58 TO 27 COMES AS SURPRISE

ROBINSON STRATEGY SEEN IN PROCEDURE

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

By an unexpected working of the new political alignments which are forming, the Senate yesterday administered a neat spanking to the Nye committee, and seated James J. Davis as a senator from Pennsylvania.

The chastisement of the committee was emphasized by the fact that the vote of 58 to 27 was not on the question of seating the former Secretary of Labor, but was a refusal to even consider at this time a resolution by Senator Nye that Davis' credentials be referred temporarily to the committee on privileges and elections.

The whole procedure smacked strongly of Senator Joe Robinson's effort to wean the Democrats away from the Progressives, in which, incidentally, he was only partly successful.

Will Launch Hearings.

The upshot of the whole business is that the committee, having fully intended to exonerate Davis of any excessive campaign expenditures, just as soon as it could dignifiedly do so, now feels hurt, or some of its members do, and intends to go ahead with hearings on the Pennsylvania expenditures today. Chairman Nye was authority for the statement, in fact, that he is satisfied the expenditures in the Davis-Brown primary will be found to total $1,000,000.

And easily they might. The committee's investigators were able to dig up only $300,000 odd, and the matter rested until last Saturday, when an alert reporter found that reports of expenditures made at Harrisbug, under Pennsylvania State law, brought the total to around $800,000. Developments have moved fast, since this was brought to the attention of the committee. It has heard from one man who says the Davis-Brown campaign committee still owes him $75,000, and also has received information that it does not know of the expenditures in some 40 counties.

This is the basis of Chairman Nye's statement that the total may run up to $1,000,000. So it may be that some embarrassment may yet be caused Mr. Davis.

Understanding Apparent.

The funny thing about it all, however, is that the committee and Mr.

EMPLOYES DESCRIBE SMITH CHECK DEALS

INDICTMENT TOTALS CUT

Some of the color in the trial in District Supreme Court of three former officers of the F. H. Smith Co. was dimmed yesterday when Frank G. Raichle, of defense counsel, brought out that the Government's bill of particulars in the case refers to alleged embezzlements of only about $1,070,000, instead of the $5,000,000 named in the indictment. The three defendants are G. Bryan Pitts, C. Albert Anadale, and John H. Edwards, jr.

Revelation of the disparity between the two figures came when Raichle objected to introduction of three canceled checks, all indorsed by Pitts and Mrs. A. E. Solomon, a former Smith Co. employe, for sums totaling $48,500. One check, for $17,500 was not admitted by Justice William Hitz, presiding, after it was shown that it was not specified in the bil of particulars.

Mrs. Solomon, Mrs. A. B. Leopold, a former stenographer for the company; Mrs. Ellen Dowling, another former employe, and Pierce E. Smith, at one time the firm's cashier, all testified that they had been instructed to indorse checks for large sums, for which they received no money. Mr. Smith further testified that he went to the company's vaults December 9, 1929, and found all canceled checks and some of the books missing. The next day, he said, they had been returned.

15 CHILDREN ESCAPE MISSION HOME FIRE

LOSS IS SET AT $10,000

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 2.—Fire this afternoon destroyed the preventorium at Mission Home, located in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains, 25 miles west of Charlottesville. Fifteen undernourished children, some of them threatened with tuberculosis, were rescued with much difficulty, and transferred in freezing temperature to nearby buildings. Attendants lost their trunks and clothing.

Mission Home, a community center supported by the Episcopal Church, is conducted by the archdeaconry of the Blue Ridge, with Rev. W. Roy Mason, of Charlottesville, in charge. In recent years over 200 poor children have been cared for, educated and returned to their homes.

The preventorium, opened three years ago, was a frame building, originally the rectory. An addition, costing $4,000, was completed last spring. It contained a dozen rooms, with spacious sleeping porches. The loss, estimated at $10,000, is only partially covered by insurance.

Had the high wind veered to the west, the Mission Home and other units, consisting of a school building, church, postoffice, clothing bureau and barns would have been destroyed.

Episcopalians in Washington and Baltimore are substantial contributors to the work. The salary of Miss Anna Park, English nurse in charge, is paid by a Baltimore woman.

President Urges Economy Except for These Emergencies.

DEMOCRATS DISPUTE MERITS OF PROGRAM

(Associated Press.)

Congress went to work yesterday with its attention centered on unemployment and drought relief after pausing to hear President Hoover's views outlined in his annual message.

Republicans and Democrats heaped varied forms of relief remedies into the legislative funnel through the day and last night the committee chairmen were calling meetings for later in the week, to organize a definite program for handling them.

In his message, President Hoover asked for $100,000,000 to $150,000,000, to accelerate construction for employment relief, and a fund for seed and feed loans to farmers whose crops dried up.

He pointed to an estimated deficit for the present fiscal year and a narrow surplus margin in prospect for the 1932 fiscal year and said:

"I can not emphasize too strongly the absolute necessity to defer any other plans for increase of Government expenditures. Most rigid economy is therefore necessary to avoid increase in taxes."

Applauded in House.

The President's recommendations were heard with customary silence in the Senate. In the House, the Republicans stood and applauded at the message's conclusion, but a number remained seated with the Democrats.

One of the first bills offered in the Senate was that of Senator Glenn, Illinois Republican, to authorize the $150,000,000 emergency funds requested by the President for use in speeding up public buildings construction and inland waterways improvements.

But the outburst of Democratic criticism in the Senate which followed the announcement of Mr. Hoover's program augured stormy days ahead on the shaping of unemployment legislation. In statements, the Democrats generally condemned the President for not going farther in his recommendations.

On drought relief there appeared to be some accord. Both Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, and Senator McNary (Republican), of Oregon, offered bills to provide a $60,000,000 loan fund for farmers in the drought-stricken areas, to be used in the purchase of seed and fertilizer.

Promises Speedy Action.

As chairman of the agriculture committee, Senator McNary said he would call the group together later in the week to take up this legislation.

The quick disposition of the controversy over the right of Senator Davis, of Pennsylvania, to his seat cleared the way in the Senate for work and it tackled its task immediately upon hearing the presidential message.

The House bill for regulation of motor bus traffic was taken up under the direction of Senator Couzens (Republican), of Michigan. Several days of debate are ahead on this.

Today, the annual budget message from President Hoover, outlining his recommendations for expenditures

There are nineteen shopping days before Christmas.

And there are nineteen more days in which to do your share to make The Washington Post's Christmas Toy Fund such a success that every boy and girl in Washington will get at least a part of what he or she wants for Christmas.

The fund is growing rapidly. Enough money to buy a lot of toys, presents and Christmas cheer for children has already been contributed. A lot more money is on the way. And still more cash to help the children enjoy Chirstmas doubtless reposes in the pockets and banks of Many Washington residents.

This appeal is not made to those who are in circumstances where every dollar counts. It is made to those who have been fortunate enough to keep their jobs and who can spare just a little to aid those who have been overtaken by misfortune.

A grandmother walked into The Post yesterday. She said to The Post Toy Fund editor that if she could be sure the money would be used for the children, she would gladly help. When she was informed that every penny of the fund was to furnish real Christmas joy only for children and that a careful check would be made to see that the funds went only

Couzens Seeks Preference By U. S. for Local Labor

Introduces Joint Resolution to Favor Bidders on Federal Construction Who Employ Residents of Work Areas and Who Pay Standard Wages.

Washington business and labor leaders who have sought preferential treatment for contractors employing local labor and paying standard wages found a champion yesterday in Senator James Couzens (Republican), of Michigan.

Senator Couzens introduced in the Senate a joint resolution providing that every Government building contract let after the resolution becomes law shall be awarded only to contractors and subcontractors who employ laborers or mechanics in the district where the work is done and pay the highest prevailing wages for the class of work in the locality.

The Couzens resolution applies nationally and was not aimed specifically at conditions in the National Capital, although it would, of course, govern all Federal contracts let here as well as elsewhere.

Whether the measure as introduced would apply to contracts awarded by the District Commissioners is doubtful, Senator Couzens said, but he added that if study showed how it could be effectively amended to include municipal contracts, such as school buildings and others, he would amend it.

The resolution defines "resident" workers as those who have resided in the community where the work is done for at least 90 days before their employment. Other than local labor would be permitted only when local labor is not available.

"It is time," Senator Couzens declared, "that the Federal Govern-

Mayflower to Be Returned To Service of Government

Former Presidential Yacht and Veteran of Spanish-American War Ordered to Survey Duty in Caribbean After Retirement by Hoover.

The historic vessel, for 27 years the presidential yacht, and consequently a Washington institution, is to be rescued from its inglorious exile at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, put back into commission and sent down to the Caribbean for survey duty. Announcement to this effect was made yesterday at the Navy Department.

The Mayflower's ensign came down shortly after President Hoover took office in March, 1929. A fisherman but not a sailor, President Hoover had no need of the yacht, and therefore saw no point in maintaining it here at an annual expense of $300,000.

Along about the same time the President also gave up the White House saddle horses, having them set to Port Myer. Then he set about building a camp on the Rapidan.

The Mayflower was originally owned by the late Ogden Goelet. It was bought from his estate by the Federal Government in March, 1898. After being fitted out as a gunboat, the vessel was sent to join the fleet off Sand Key, Fla. Thus, when she goes back to the Caribbean this time, she will be in familiar waters.

In the War with Spain, the Mayflower did valiant service, taking a part in three blockades, those at Santiago, Porto Rico and Havana. In the latter blockade, the Mayflower en-

Will Get Budget Message.

Today also Mr. Hoover intends to send up the first of a great number of nominations and in the disposition of these the Senate will have plenty to keep it busy for several days.

Another high point of controversy demanding solution at this session—the row between the Senate and the House over Muscle Shoals—will receive attention today.

Senator McNary, chairman of the conferees on this legislation, has called a meeting and intends to insist upon a vote by the House on the Senate's resolution for Government operation. The House has passed a bill for private operation.

The House Republican steering committee meanwhile failed yesterday to agree upon a program.

New District Measures Introduced in Senate

Four new District bills, recommended by the District Commissioners, were introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, chairman of the Senate District committee.

They were: Substitute for the Borland law, a new traffic act, a bill to empower cleaning of vacant lots, and a measure to relieve the Commissioners of the necessity of actually signing all official papers. Representative Frederick Zihlman (Republican), of Maryland, chairman of the House District committee, introduced the Borland substitute and the traffic measure in the House.

Clay's Kin to Miss Shaft's Unveiling

No Room on Board Vessel Carrying Delegation to Venezuela.

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Miss Henrietta Clay, great-granddaughter of the Kentucky statesman, will not be able to attend the unveiling, December 9, of a statue to him at Caracas, Venezuela, as the result of being refused passage on the U. S. S. Northampton, carrying President Hoover's delegation.

Miss Clay, a member of the Kentucky delegation, said today that if she had been advised in time she could have made other arrangements for the trip. Members of the State delegation were told that the quarters on the cruiser were too limited to accommodate them, and as a result the State will not be officially represented. Representative and Mrs. M. H. Thatcher, of Kentucky, are going as members of the presidential delegation. He sought to have the State Department accommodate the Kentucky delegation.

New York, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—A mission headed by James R. Sheffield, former United States Ambassador to Mexico, sailed today on the cruiser Northampton for La Guaira, Venezuela, to represent the United States at the unveiling of a statue of Henry Clay at Caracas.

3 Stray Children Sent Back Home

Three Washington children, Sylva Zemberg, 6 years old; Philip Zemberg, 9, and Kate Woodson, 9, were halted shortly after beginning a tour of the South. They had reached a point about 8 miles below their starting point Monday night when returned to their parents by Alexandria police.

State Prohibition Officer Virgil Williams, called by the proprietor of a gasoline filling station just south of Hunting Creek Bridge, took the children to Alexandria police headquarters where, when questioned, they told a stirring tale of having been abandoned on the road by their parents, and gave the name and address of a grandmother in Richmond. Police Capt. Campbell telephoned the grandmother, and was given the address of the children's parents in Washington.

In the meantime the wayfarers were taken to the Alexandria Children's Home and Day Nursery and made comfortable until their parents arrivtd. The father of the Zemberg children said he had given each of the trio 15 cents when they started for school in the morning. Possession of this wealth evidently gave the children the idea of visiting their grandmother in Richmond. It is believed that they walked the entire distance from Washington to where they were found.

He was found to have a broken right femur and a triple kneecap fracture. Mrs. Brown's kneecap also was broken and she is in the hospital.

PARTY COMMENTS ON MESSAGE VARY

(Associated Press.)

Many and varied expressions of opinion were heard on Capitol Hill yesterday after President Hoover's annual message had been read to Congress.

Speaker Longworth termed the President's review of business conditions "very encouraging" and said he thought the message as a whole a "very interesting" document.

Representative Garner, the Democratic floor leader, said Mr. Hoover should have explained just where and how he proposed the emergency unemployment appropriation of $150,000,000 should be spent.

"If he expects to get that much money," he commented, "he will have to show what he is going to do with it."

Senator Watson, the Republican leader, said he thought the message "admirable in all respects," but regretted the President's decision to send the World Court protocols to the Senate at this time.

Statesmanlike, Says Watson.

"Mr. Hoover sets forth the needs and requirements of the peopl and Government at this time completely, and I regard the statement as wise and statesmanlike," Watson said.

The Democratic leader, Senator Robinson, Arkansas, expressed doubt that the President's account of employment was complete and said there were thousands in the rural sections out of work who had not found opportunity for bringing their requirements to the attention of the Labor Department.

Representative Tilson, Republican floor leader, said the message was timely and sound, and that if Congress keeps within its terms, it will do everything that can be done.

The message showed the President had "no conception of existing conditions," said Senator Harrison, Mississippi, a Democratic spokesman on finance questions.

Representative Purnell (Republican), Indiana, said the message impressed him. Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, called it a "disappointment."

Falls Short, La Guardia's View.

Representative Hawley, chairman of the ways and means committee, termed the document an "excellent presentation of the admirable measures taken by the President for public good under conditions prevailing now and in recent months."

"It was not up to the occasion," said Representative La Guardia (Republican), New York.

"It was a concise and forceful statement," said Representative Hoch (Republican), Kansas.

Chairman Jones, of the Senate appropriations committee, called the message "a clear, concise, business-like statement of Government affairs." "It recommends," he said, "concrete measures to meet the emergency situation in the country."

Like Garner, Representative Byrns (Democrat), Tennessee, asked for an explanation of how the proposed emergency fund is to be spent. He is ranking minority member of the appropriations committe and said he would oppose such an appropriation unless an "explanation is forthcoming."

Senator Phipps (Republican), Colorado, regarded the message as one which "should give encouragement to the people generally," but an Iowa Republican, Senator Brookhart, said relief should be given agriculture generally and not be restricted to drought sections.

Representative O'Connor, New York, a leader of the Tammany delegation, also found fault with the message, in that three of the five pieces of legislation the President recommended finishing, "relate to attempts to enforce the unenforceable experiment—prohibition."

Davis seemed to have a perfect understanding. Indeed, many critics of the committee long since got the impression that it did not have its heart in its work, in pursuing Mr. Davis' expenditures. After all, and in spite of his wealth, he is still of us common people, so to speak.

Anyway when these additional expenditures came to light, Davis agreed with Nye that he would not present himself in the Senate until the committee could look into them, a matter of two or three days.

It was a great disappointment to Davis because it had been a consuming ambition with him to ride from the Labor Department to the Senate in a Cabinet car, sort of like the President does when he goes up to deliver his message in person. Even when it became apparent that there would be a delay in taking his seat in the Senate, he did not lay aside this ambition, but intended to stay right in his Labor post and would have done so had not the President become piqued over the ridiculous situation that was created and let Mr. Davis know that his resignation became effective today.

Inconvenience to Doak.

Davis' reluctance to quit the Cabinet post, however, had already worked inconvenience to W. N. Doak, his successor, who now does not become a Cabinet member until the Senate confirms him. He had to attend last night's White House dinner to the Cabinet as simply the Hon. W. N. Doak.

But early yesterday, with Davis out of a job, Senators Robinson and Dave Reed, who went to the London peace parley together, goth their heads together and Robinson agreed that his followers would not go along with the Nye committee. Then Davis was notified to come on up to the Capitol, and about the first that Nye knew anything had happened was when he saw Davis in the chamber.

Reed very promptly got up and said that Davis was present, ready to be sworn in. Nye jumped up and offered a resolution to refer his credentials to the privileges and elections committee. Reed made a point of order that the resolution had to lay over a day. Then after much haggling as to procedure, Nye asked for immediate consideration of his resolution. It was voted down and then Davis was sworn in.

Walsh Opposed Resolution.

Strangely enough, Tom Walsh, of Montana, voted with Robinson against the resolution, as did most of those who have come to be looked upon as Walsh's followers, while Robinson's followers, generally speaking, voted with Nye. Walsh subsequently explained that there was no parallel between the Davis and Vare cases. Nothing had been placed before the Senate on which it could act against Davis, he explained.

Yet, just a few years ago, he challenged Senator Gould, of Maine, as he was taking his oath, and had his credentials held up until some charges concerning Gould could be investigated.

Before the Senate met, Robinson met with his steering committee and it was agreed then that the Democrats would not support Nye. Robinson then issued a statement designed to hold his followers in line, taking pretty much the same position that Walsh did.

Slipped on Form.

He almost slipped up on the form this statement should take, though. He had had in mind a statement saying Vare was ousted because his election was tainted with fraud, and in that way differed from the issue presented by the Davis case.

In the steering committee meeting, however, somebody suggested to him that if he just had to issue a statement he had better not issue the one he had in mind, because, while much of the discussion in the Vare case turned on fraud and corruption, the vote, when it was finally taken, turned on the issue of excessive expenditures. So Robinson's explanation was different from the one he had had in mind.

Senator Dill, of Washington, a member of the committee, in a statement to his home-town paper, let the cat out of the bag as to what the committee had intended doing about Davis. The committee had only been holding him up until it could look into an item of $250,000, he was quoted as saying. But now that matter had been cleared up and the committee intended to report that although there were excessive expenditures in Pennsylvania, they were not for Davis' campaign.

Action Felt Keenly.

This statement came from Dill after the Senate had spanked the committee. When it was called to Nye's attention he said that Dill must be in possession of information which he did not have. Nye feels very keenly over the Senate's action and so does Seantor Dale.

A factor entering into the rebuke, of course, is that his committee went into Tennessee and North Carolina and, of the latter State, said its political bosses were about as high-handed as those of Pennsylvania. And a matter that has always assured ultimate safety for Davis is organized labor's support. Davis is not of the capitalistic class, you might say.

He issued a statement after he was seated, saying, "Pennsylvania now has her full complement of senators," wholly ignoring Senator Joe Grundy, whom he succeeds.

HOOVER ADVOCATES DISTRICT DRY LAW

STATUS OF LEGISLATION

Enactment of a prohibition enforcement measure for the District was urged by President Hoover in his annual message read to Congress yesterday.

It was the only District matter the Chief Executive singled out for special mention in his message. His reference was brief.

"The Congress," he said, "has before it legislation partially completed in the last sitting in respect to Muscle Shoals, bus regulation, relief of congestion in the courts, reorganization of border control in prevention of smuggling, law enforcement in the District of Columbia, and other subjects.

"It is desirable that these measures should be completed."

Howell Measure Drastic.

Two local prohibition enforcement bills have been introduced, one by Representative W. H. Sproul (Republican), of Kansas, and the other by Senator Robert B. Howell (Republican), of Nebraska. It is the latter measure which has come to occupy principal attention. The Sproul measure, introduced soon after members of the House rose and cheered the shooting to death of a young suspected rumrunner, has been about forgotten.

Senator Howell, however, announced a few days ago that he intended to fight for enactment of his local-law enforcement bill, the provisions of which are so severe that it has become known as the home raid bill.

Senator Howell's measure is much more drastic than the Volstead act itself and has met with the publicly expressed disapproval of the Department of Justice. Attorney General Mitchell sent an adverse report on the measure to Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, chairman of the Senate District committee and subsequently Assistant Attorney General Youngquist, who succeeded to the job formerly held by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, appeared at a public hearing held by the committee and disapproved of the Howell measure.

Hoover Indorsemnet Seen.

President Hoover's declaration in his message in favor of enactment of a local prohibition enforcement measure, therefore was not taken as an indorsement of the Howell bill, which apparently has little chance of getting far in this session, if ever.

The law-enforcement measure desired for the District by the President is believed to have as its principal feature designation of all District policemen as Federal prohibition agents as well as municipal policemen. Such a thing has been advocated by District Commissioners in the past and by chiefs of the District Police Department.

Thirty-eight District policemen now are Federal prohibition agents by virtue of a special arrangement between District police authorities and Federal prohibition enforcement officials. These men are those assigned especially to the detection of prohibition violations in the District.

Regardless of the admonition of the President yesterday, however, it is not likely that there will be enacted at this session any comprehensive law for local prohibition enforcement.

Wet leaders, it is believed, would at least make the measure a target for their oratory and make its road a rocky one in view of the comfort they found in the recent elections.

New York Man Is Held For Virginia Car Theft

Winchester, Va., Dec. 2.—Harold V. Makely, said to be from New York, is being held in $5,000 bail for the Corporation Court grand jury charged with the theft of an automobile and a taxicab. He was remanded to jail today, unable to post bond.

He pleaded not guilty when arraigned. However, police said Makely was found recently in Richmond in possession of a car belonging to Mrs. Douglas Fuller Smith, of Winchester, which had been reported by her as having been stolen.

NEW HOUSE OFFICE CONTRACT AWARDED

$5,270,000 LOWEST BID

Contract for construction of the new House office building was awarded yesterday to the Consolidated Engineering Co., of Baltimore, builders of the new Department of Commerce building.

Award of the contract was announced by David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, after a meeting of the office building commission, composed of Speaker Longworth, Representatives Bacharach and Garner.

The bid by the Consolidated Engineering Co., $5,270,000, was the lowest submitted. The building will lie in the square bounded by South Capitol street, B street, New Jersey avenue and C street southeast. It will be in harmony with the present House Office Building. The foundation will be completed about December 15 and construction of the superstructure will be begun immediately thereafter.

The time allowed for completion under the contract is two years and six months, but Mr. Lynn said it was expected the structure would be ready for occupancy in about two years. The contractors are said to be about eight months ahead of their schedule on the Commerce building.

Designed by Mr. Lynn, who has had the Allied Architects as consultants, the new office building will have a white marble exterior, Alabama limestone interior and Indiana limestone court. The base will be of granite.

A total of $7,500,000 has been authorized for construction of the building, but savings have been made and it is believed now that furnishing of the building can be kept within that amount. Furnishings are expected to cost about $700,000, Mr. Lynn said.

Awarding of the contract clears the deck in the Capitol architect's office temporarily, but bids work is expected to be begun soon on the new United States Supreme Court Building. The first contract let on that project will cover the foundation. Award for the building itself is expected in the spring. There has been $9,700,000 authorized for the structure.

The Capitol enlargement and beautification program calls for expenditure of $35,000,000.

250,000 Fewer Men Employed by Railways

The figures were September 1930, 1,485,906; September, 1929, 1,747,816.

Those sentenced are John Zillac, 41 years old, of McKeesport, Pa.; Helen Roberts, 17, of Baltimore; Rose Stein, 38, of New York City; Rose Markle, 34, of New York City, and Paudelis Kirldin, 35, of Chicago. All those arraigned in Police Court and a number of others had been arrested Monday during the demonstration that centered around the Peace Monument and which police quelled only after using tear gas bombs. All involved are alleged to be Communists.

No charges of violating the laws of the United States were made and the prosecution came under District regulations, Assistant Corporation Counsel Raymond Sparks appearing as prosecutor. The defendants were represented by Attorney Charles E. Ford, who declared his clients were merely seeking to present a petition to Congress.

Zillac appeared with a broken nose, said to have been suffered in the encounter. He was sent to the hospital after his trial.

HONEYMOON IN VIRGINIA

counted early in the day by Edward Pierce, during two separate periods a Smith Co. bookkeeper. Pierce stated that he had been employed by the brokerage firm from September, 1926, until May, 1927, and later in 1929. While he was thus employed, he declared, he was given the task of "breaking down" the firm's "suspense account," to which tems were charged while awaiting transfer to specific accounts.

Checks drawn through this expense account, he said, were frequently made payable to cash, and later transferred to Mr. Edwards' account. Such checks, he testified, were usually drawn in round figures between $5,000 and $15,000, although "not many ran over $10,000."

In describing occasions upon which she said she had indorsed checks for large amounts made out to her, Mrs. Solomon said that her salary, between May, 1926, and May, 1930, when she worked for the company, ranged between $15 per week and $40 per week. At the time she said the checks were given to her for indorsement, her salary amounted to about $30 per week, she declared.

A new departure in evidence offered in a District Supreme Court came when a motion picture machine was used by the prosecution to show canceled checks introduced in evidence The instrument, which is operated by hand and shows a motion-picture film under a strong light, was demonstrated to the jury by a representative of the Murray Hill Trust Co., of New York.

Tilts Over Testimony.

The day was featured by several sharp tilts between opposing counsel, over the admissibility of testimony and documentary evidence. Raichle entered numerous objections to such evidence and testimony. So far, more than 70 exceptions to rulings of the Court have been noted by the defense, upon which appeal may be based in the event of an unfavorable verdict.

In one instance yesterday, Mr. Pierce, the former Smith Co. bookkeeper, described the "suspense account" as "more or less a temporary dumping ground for items they had no place for."

Mr. Raichle, after attempting to halt the witness, objected to his statement and moved that it be stricken from the record. Both the objection and the motion were sustained by the court.

Indorsement Not Shown.

Although Wilton J. Lambert, chief defense counsel, had said when the motion picture machine made its appearance in the courtroom, that he would oppose any effort to introduce it in support of testimony, when the time came to exhibit the pictures, the demonstration went through as scheduled. Mr. Raichle, however, brought out in cross-examination, that the machine does not record indorsements on checks.

Up until adjournment yesterday afternoon, the prosecution had called some 43 witnesses, several of whom had been recalled to the stand. It is understood that the Government will produce approximately 100 witnesses, while the defense is expected to call about half that number.

Much of the Government's questioning of witnesses yesterday was carried out by Neil Burkinshaw, an assistant district attorney, although several witnesses were interrogated by Nugent Dodds, acting Assistant Attorney General, leader of prosecution counsel. In addition to Mr. Lambert and Mr. Raichle, attorneys for the three former officers of the Smith company are George D. Horning, jr., and Rudoph H. Yeatman.

SUBURBS PRAISED AT GRANGE SESSION

TAX SYSTEM EXPLAINED

Praise for civic pride, which has led to the organized beautification program in Prince Georges and Montgomery counties and the theory that postwar conditions led to the current depression were advanced by speakers last night at the fifty-eighth annual meeting and banquet in Woodside, Md., Methodist Episcopal Church of Maryland State Grange. Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the University of Maryland, was toastmaster.

"Civic pride," said Maj. E. Brooke Lee, speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates, "has motivated Prince Georges and Montgomery counties in increasing their assessments so that each now has a budget of approximately $1,000,000. These sums are exclusive of the $276,000 which each county pays annually in State taxes."

The Maryland suburban section which is the northern fringe of the District of Columbia has been developed, said Maj. Lee, almost entirely at the expense of Prince Georges and Montgomery. The $100,000 voted in 1927 by the Legislature is still in the State treasury and will not be expended until next summer, Maj. Lee said.

Keeping Pace With Capital.

"We feel great pride," said Lee, "in the impression which developments in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties has made upon the Capital City of the Nation. As a matter of State pride, we feel that we can count on increased State support for the program necessary to enable suburban Montgomery and Prince Georges County to keep pace with Washington."

Support by the State of land development in western Maryland was held justified by Maj. Lee on the ground that constant improvements increased land values, thus increasing tax amounts.

Referring to the proposed Federal loan for the beautification of land adjacent to the Capital, Maj. Lee declared in favor of a plan whereby each of the eight Western Shore counties should assume responsibility for the obligation along the with State.

Theory of Slump Cause.

Increased industrial efficiency and overproduction which resulted after the American soldiers returned from France was described by State Senator-elect Emery C. Coblentz as a forerunner of the present depression.

"In 1929," said Mr. Coblentz, "75 men were doing the work which in 1925 required the efforts of 100. Such a jump in efficiency and output necessitate the creation of a sales organization such as the world had never before known."

The drought aggravated conditions wrought by overproduction, said Mr. Coblentz.

He advised the farmers to keep up their courage, pointing out that fewer loans had been asked from those Maryland sections hardest hit by the dry spell.

300 Delegates Attend.

More than 300 delegates and members attended the meeting yesterday in the Silver Spring National Guard Armory. The meeting opened with reports of officers and the annual address of State Grange Master A. G. Ensor, of Forest Hill, Md.

Officers who reported were: T. Roy Brookes, overseer; Guy S. Meloy, treasurer; Mrs. Maude M. Hudson, secretary; C. R. Hartshorne, chaplain; Austin F. Renn, steward; E. A. Shoemaker, assistant steward; J. B. Edelkamp, gatekeeper; Mrs. T. Roy Brookes, lecturer; Mrs. A. G. Ensor, Ceres; Mrs. Homer Remsberg, Pomona; Mrs. Edna Mitchell, lady assistant steward, and Mrs. E. A. Cairnes, Flora.

Several resolutions were presented and referred to the resolutions committee for action tomorrow.

A discussion of grange affairs was led by Pomona Masters J. W. Lord, E. A. Shoemaker, Martha E. Hopkins, McHenry Mitchell, Austin P. Renn, John E. Edelkamp, W. C. Rhode and D. M. Lower. Addresses were made by T. Roy Brookes, H. B. Derrick, Homer Remsberg, J. D. McVean, Miss Florence Mason, Dr. T. B. Symons, in charge of extension service at the University of Maryland; Miss Helen Pearson and Mrs. Joseph H. Blandford. Mrs. Edna Mitchell presided at the afternoon session.

The program today will include an address by former Gov. Harry T. Byrd, of Virginia, and discussions of grange problems and principles. The sixth degree will be conferred tonight.

General opposition to the use of poison gas was expressed. On motion of Hugh S. Gibson, American delegate, the commission invited all governments to set their experts at work on the question and be prepared at the general conference to draft an agreement which would clarify the restrictions.

MAYFLOWER GIVEN SEA DUTY ORDERS

After the war the Mayflower became the temporary flagship of Admiral George Dewey, hero of Manila Bay. President Roosevelt saw the vessel and commandeered it as the Presidential yacht.

President Wilson rarely used it. President Harding, however, took several long cruises on it. President Coolidge used it more than any of these two, but never did he go any farther than Chesapeake Bay on her.

Many notables have been guests on the Mayflower, including Marshal Joffre and the other members of the French War Mission to the United States. In 1905 the Mayflower conveyed the special envoys of Russia and Japan to Portsmouth, N. H., and it was there that peace between the two countries was arranged.

The decision to put the Mayflower back in commission was pleasing to Navy officers. They had feared she would be bought by some excursion magnate and converted into a whoopee craft on the Hudson or somewhere.

The yacht was offered for sale four times, but all bids were rejected by the Navy Department.

AID OF LOCAL LABOR, COUZENS' MOVE AIM

ment undertook not only to protect the communities in employment of their own residents, but also to see that contractors are not permitted to depress wage scales.

"We have plenty of precedent for law of this kind in the eight-hour law, which was enacted by Congress in June, 1912. It has come to my attention that contractors from extremely low wage territories are going into communities and bringing their men with them. This is not only depressing the wage scale in these communities, but it is leaving the local people without employment. It is, therefore, of course, preventing contractors who pay the going wage from getting contracts.

"Everything should be done by the Federal Government to encourage the maintenance of wages and to insure that residents be permitted to get the work done in their own communities."

The Couzens resolution was one of two measures introduced in the Senate dealing with Government building. Senator Henry W. Keyes (Republican), of New Hampshire, introduced a bill cutting much of the legal red tape with which the letting of Government building contracts now is surrounded.

The Keyes bill would authorize the Secretary of the Treasury under certain conditions to let work without competitive bidding, to cut down the required period of advertising for bids for contracts, and to restrict bidders to those he determines are capable of doing the work satisfactorily.

Bethesda to Order Fire-Fighting Gear

Board Authorizes Buying of Equipment Costing $23,000.

The Bethesda fire board has authorized additions to equipment and housing costing $23,000, it was announced yesterday, to make the Bethesda Volunteer Fire Department one of the most modern in Montgomery County.

It will not be necessary to issue bonds to provide the funds, the company's treasury having sufficient funds to make the first payment and the fire tax providing a means of paying off the indebtedness.

The immediate purchase of a hose wagon with booster and 50-gallon pumper, costing approximately $5,500, and the conversion of the company's present hose wagon into a rescue squad wagon with modern equipment costing about $2,000. A $12,000 engine is to be purchased in the early part of next year. The engine will have a 750-gallon pumper and capable of high pressure water ejection. Hose costing $750 also is to be bought. An addition to the present firehouse to house the new equipment also was authorized. Work on this will start as soon as plans can be prepared as an unemployment relief measure, according to O. P. M. Brown, president of the board.

Youth Shot by Brother In Quarrel With Father

Special to The Washington Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 2.—A quarrel between a Stafford County father and son culminated in a shooting, when a younger son sided with the parent and fired at his elder brother, the shot striking his abdomen. Frederick Kurz, 21, is in the Mary Washington Hospital here, while his father, Jake Kurz, and brother, Junior Kurz, remain at home and characterize the shooting as an accident.

Gus Kurz, a cousin of the trio, was fired at twice, when he fled after attempting to get the gun.

Head of Closed Bank Sees Full Liquidation

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Dec. 2.—Edwin S. Reid, president of the Chatham Bank, whose doors were closed by the State Banking Department, issued a statement on his return to Chatham today in which he expressed belief that none of the depositors will suffer.

"The bank was closed," he said, "because of recent heavy demands and frozen assets, due to the present depressed conditions. If the affairs of the bank are properly handled all the depositors should be paid in full and it is hoped reorganization can be established."

for this purpose, she wrote out her check and departed, happy that she had been able to do her share.

Many letters are being received with contributions wishing The Post success in this plan of providing for the children because, as the letters state, it is "a good idea." It seems that in the past, when charitable organizations began their annual campaigns to spread joy at Christmas, their thoughts ran to clothes, food and fuel rather than to things which brings smiles to children's faces. On Christmas Day, The Post believes, the average child would rather have a tin horn and a sack of candy than a turkey dinner. Of course if he or she can have both, so much better and The Post hopes every hchld will.

But while the organized charities are caring for the material wants of families, The Post fund is designed solely to see that boys and girls get at least a portion of what they desire. And the gifts will come to the children through their parents. Affiliated agencies of the Council of Social Agencies have lists of families where such presents for youngsters will be as welcome as the flowers in May. And workers from these agencies will see that the children get Christmas cheer from the money, and not some other member of the family.

The Post today prints the first section of its list of contributors to the Toy fund. Each day additional contributions will be listed, together with the amount previously given. Hop on board and help to make Christmas, 1930, one that will not be forgotten by the "kids," the depression, unemployment and stock market crashes to the contrary, notwithstanding.

There is no limit, either low or high, on contributions to the fund. Pennies from your baby's bank or $1,000 bills alike will help the cause. And one youngster's smile on Christmas Day is worth more than any of us can calculate.

MISSION CONGRESS HEARS RURAL NEEDS

Report Reveals 5,000,000 Unchurched; Adequate Ministry Sought.

SCOPE OF WORK DEFINED

Rural United States numbers 5,000,000 persons who live in communities without churches, the North American Home Mission Congress was told yesterday at its five-day session in Calvary Baptist Church by the Rev. Dr. Hermann N. Morse, of New York, general counselor.

This was embodied in a report presented to the 800 delegates, representing 28 Protestant denominations or agencies. The day's program covered a wide range of religious and social questions discussed by thirteen groups, Dr. Morse being general chairman. Discussion will continue today and tonight, and pertinent facts will be referred to a findings committee for open floor discussion tomorrow.

"One of the important considerations before the Home Missions Congress will be the question of providing a ministry for about 10,000 small communities in which the unchurched millions live," Dr. Morse said.

Overchurched, He Says.

"It is widely believed rural America, as a whole, is adequately churched. Indeed, it is overchurched. This generally is true of the larger and more accessible communities. The era of active and rapid church extension in rural areas ended a generation ago, when the homesteading era ended.

"In rural America, broadly speaking, no churches have been organized by the standard denominations since the turn of the century. On the contrary, an imposingly large number have been abandoned, consolidated or suffered to become inactive. Such intelligent oversight as rural churches have received has been aimed as salvage and promotion, rather than extension.

"Extensive surveys in recent years show that as far as nine-tenths of the rural communities are concerned the problem is to develop fewer and better churches with a broader and more intensive service ministry. But for the other tenth the problem is to provide a ministry where the church is now doing practically nothing. This problem obtained to some extent in all parts of the country, but it is more of a factor in sparsely settled sections or where broken topography makes for many isolated communities.

Covers Vast Area.

"Data assembled for this Missions Congress show that organized home missions today is an impressive enterprise. It covers all of Continental United States, Alaska, Canada and the West Indies. It deals with every known type of population. It works with the various immigrant races, Negroes, Orientals, Indians, Eskimos, Mexicans. It has missions for migrant workers, for Mormons, for Jews. One board alone conducts work regularly in 65 languages.

"From a fourth to a third of all Protestant churches are mission churches. The number of home missionaries is upward of 30,000. Home missions support a great variety of institutions. The total value of mission properties and the total annual budget expended entitle home missions to rank among the Nation's big business."

MESSAGE STRESSES RELIEF FOR UNEMPLOYED

Aid Also Requested For Drought Victims

People Must Have Courage and Faith in Present Trials Brought on by Business Depression, President Says.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I have the honor to comply with the requirement of the Constitution that I should lay before the Congress information as to the state of the Union, and recommend consideration of such measures as are necessary and expedient.

Substantial progress has been made during the year in national peace and security; the fundamental strength of the Nation's economic life is unimpaired; education and scientific discovery have made advances; our country is more alive to its problems of moral and spiritual welfare.

Economic Situation.

During the past twelve months we have suffered with other nations from economic depression.

The origins of this depression lie to some extent within our own borders through a speculative period which diverted capital and energy into speculation rather than constructive enterprise. Had overspeculation in securities been the only force operating, we should have seen recovery many months ago, as these particular dislocations have generally readjusted themselves.

Other deep-seated causes have been in action, however, chiefly the world-wide overproduction beyond even the demand of prosperous times for such important basic commodities as wheat, rubber, coffee, sugar, copper, silver, zinc, to some extent cotton, and other raw materials. The cumulative effects of demoralizing price falls of these important commodities in the process of adjustment of production to world consumption have produced financial crises in many countries and have diminished the buying power of these countries for imported goods to a degree which extended the difficulties farther afield by creating unemployment in all the industrial nations. The political agitation in Asia; revolutions in South America and political unrest in some European states; the methods of sale by Russia of her increasing agricultural exports to European markets; and our drought—have all contributed to prolong and deepen the depression.

In the larger view the major forces of the depression now lie outside of the United States, and our recuperation has been retarded by the unwarranted degree of fear and apprehension created by these outside forces.

The extent of the depression is indicated by the following approximate percentages of activity during the past three months as compared with the highly prosperous year of 1928:

Value of department store sales	93% of 1928
Volume of manufacturing production	80% of 1928
Volume of mineral production	90% of 1928
Volume of factory employment	84% of 1928
Total of bank deposits	105% of 1928
Wholesale prices—all commodities	83% of 1928
Cost of living	94% of 1928

Increasing Factors Seen.

There are many factors which give encouragement for the future. The fact that we are holding from 80 to 85 per cent of our normal activities and incomes; that our major financial and industrial institutions have come through the storm unimpaired; that price levels of major commodities have remained approximately stable for some time; that a number of industries are showing signs of increasing demand; that the world at large is readjusting itself to the situation; all reflect grounds for confidence. We should remember that these occasions have been met many times before, that they are but temporary, that our country is today stronger and richer in resources, in equipment, in skill, than ever in its history. We are in an extraordinary degree self-sustaining, we will overcome world influences and will lead the march of prosperity as we have always done hitherto.

Economic depression can not be cured by legislative action or executive pronouncement. Economic wounds must be healed by the action of the cells of the economic body—the producers and consumers themselves. Recovery can be expedited and its efforts mitigated by cooperative action. That cooperation requires that every individual should sustain faith and courage; that each should maintain his self-reliance; that each and every one should search for method of improving his business or service; that the vast majority whose income is unimpaired should not hoard out of fear but should pursue their normal living and recreations; that each should seek to assist his neighbors who may be less fortunate; that each industry should assist its own employes; that each community and each State should asume its full responsibilities for organization of employment and relief of distress with that sturdiness and independence which built a great Nation.

The best contribution of government lies in encouragement of this voluntary cooperation in the community. The Government, National, State, and local, can join with the community in such programs and do its part. A year ago I, together with other officers of the Government, initiated extensive cooperative measures throughout the country.

Most Undertakings Adhered To.

The first of these measures was an agreement of leading employers to maintain the standards of wages and of labor leaders to use their influence against strife. In a large sense these undertakings have been adhered to and we have not witnessed the usual reductions of wages which have always heretofore marked depressions. The index of union wage scales shows them to be today fully up to the level of any of the previous three years. In consequence the buying power of the country has been much larger than would otherwise have been the case. Of equal importance the Nation has had unusual peace in industry and freedom from the public disorder which has characterized previous depressions.

The second direction of cooperation has been that our governments, national, State, and local, the industries and business so distribute employment as to give work to the maximum number of employes.

The third direction of cooperation has been to maintain and even extend construction work and betterments in anticipation of the future. It has been the universal experience in previous depressions that public works and private construction have fallen off rapidly with the general tide of depression. On this occasion, however, the increased authorization and generous appropriations by the Congress and the action of States and municipalities have resulted in the expansion of public construction to an amount even above that in the most prosperous years. In addition the cooperation of public utilities, railways, and other large organizations has been generously given in construction and betterment work in anticipation of future need. The Department of Commerce advises me that as a result, the volume of this type of construction work, which amounted to roughly $6,300,000,000 in 1929, instead of decreasing will show a total of about $7,000,000,000 for 1930. There has, of course, been a substantial decrease in the types of construction which could not be undertaken in advance of need.

The fourth direction of cooperation was the organization in such States and municipalities, as was deemed necessary, of committees to organize local employment, to provide for employment agencies, and to effect relief of distress.

Suffering Kept at Minimum.

The result of magnificent cooperation throughout the country has been that actual suffering has been kept to a minimum during the past twelve months, and our unemployment has been far less in proportion than in other large industrial countries. Some time ago it became evident that unemployment would continue over the winter and would necessarily be added to from seasonal causes and that the savings of workpeople would be more largely depleted. We have as a Nation a definite duty to see that no deserving person in our country suffers from hunger or cold. I therefore set up a more extensive organization to stimulate more intensive cooperation throughout the country. There has been a most gratifying degree of response, from governors, mayors, and other public officials, from welfare organizations, and from employers in concerns both large and small. The local communities, through their voluntary agencies, have assumed the duty of relieving individual distress and are being generously supported by the public.

The number of those wholly out of employment seeking for work was accurately determined by the census last April as about 2,500,000. The Department of Labor index of employment in the larger trades shows some decrease in employment since that time. The problem from a relief point of view is somewhat less than the published estimates of the number of unemployed would indicate. The intensive community and individual efforts in providing special employment outside the listed industries are not reflected in the statistical indexes and tend to reduce such published figures. Moreover, there is estimated to be a constant figure at all times of nearly 1,000,000 unemployed who are not without annual income, but temporarily idle in the shift from one job to another. We have an average of about three breadwinners to each two families, so that every person unemployed does not represent a family without income. The view that the relief problems are less than the gross numbers would indicate is confirmed by the experience of several cities, which shows that the number of families in distress represents from 10 to 20 per cent of the number of the calculated unemployed. This is not said to minimize the very real problem which exists, but to weigh its actual proportions.

U. S. to Expend $530,000,000.

As a contribution to the situation the Federal Government is engaged upon the greatest program of waterway, harbor, flood control, public building, highway and airway improvement in all our history. This, together with loans to merchant shipbuilders, improvement of the Navy and in military aviation, and other construction work of the Government will exceed $520,000,000 for this fiscal year. This compares with $253,000,000 in the fiscal year 1928. The construction works already authorized and the continuation of policies in Government aid will require a continual expenditure upward of half a billion dollars annually.

I favor still further temporary expansion of these activities in aid to unemployment during this winter. The Congress will, however, have presented to it numbers of projects, some of them under the guise of, rather than the reality of, their usefulness in the increase of employment during the depression. There are certain common-sense limitations upon any expansions of construction work. The Government must not undertake works that are not of sound economic purpose and that have not been subject to searching technical investigation, and which have not been given adequate consideration by the Congress. The volume of construction work in the Government is already at the maximum limit warranted by financial prudence as a continuing policy. To increase taxation for purposes of construction work defeats its own purpose, as such taxes directly diminish employment in private industry. Again, any kind of construction requires, after its authorization, a considerable time before labor can be employed in which to make engineering, architectural, and legal preparations. Our immediate problem is the increase of employment for the next six months, and new plans which do not produce such immediate result or which extend commitments beyond this period are not warranted.

The enlarged rivers and harbors, public building and highway plans authorized by the Congress last session, however, offer an opportunity for assistance by the temporary acceleration of construction of these programs even faster than originally planned, especially if the technical requirements of the laws which entail great delays could be amended in such fashion as to speed up acquirements of land and the letting of contracts.

With view, however, to the possible need for acceleration, we immediately upon receiving those authorities from the Congress five months ago, began the necessary technical work in preparation for such possible eventuality. I have canvassed the departments of the Government as to the maximum amount that can be properly added to our present expenditure to accelerate all construction during the next six months, and I feel warranted in asking the Congress for an appropriation of from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 to provide such further employment in this emergency. In connection therewith we need some authority to make enlarged temporary advances of Federal highway aid to the States.

I recommend that this appropriation be made distributable to the different departments upon recommendation of a committee of the Cabinet and approval by the President. Its application to works already authorized by the Congress assures its use in directions of economic importance and to public welfare. Such action will imply an expenditure upon construction of all kinds of over $650,000,000 during the next twelve months.

Agriculture Is Reviewed.

The world-wide depression has affected agriculture in common with all other industries. The average price of farm produce has fallen to about 80 per cent of the levels of 1928. This average is, however, greatly affected by wheat and cotton, which have participated in world-wide overproduction and have fallen to about 60 per cent of the average price of the year 1928. Excluding these commodities, the prices of all other agricultural products are about 84 per cent of those of 1928. The average wholesale prices of other primary goods, such as nonferrous metals, have fallen to 76 per cent of 1928.

The price levels of our major agricultural commodities are, in fact, higher than those in other principal producing countries, due to the combined result of the tariff and the operations of the Farm Board. For instance, wheat prices at Minneapolis are about 30 per cent higher than at Winnipeg, and at Chicago they are about 20 per cent higher than at Buenos Aires. Corn prices at Chicago are over twice as high as at Buenos Aires. Wool prices average more than 60 per cent higher in this country than abroad, and butter is 30 per cent higher in New York City than in Copenhagen.

Aside from the misfortune to agriculture of the world-wide depression we have had the most severe drought. It has affected particularly the States bordering on the Potomac, Ohio, and lower Mississippi Rivers, with some areas in Montana, Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas. It has found its major expression in the shortage of pasturage and a shrinkage in the corn crop from an average of about 2,800,000,000 bushels to about 2,090,000,000 bushels.

Governors Were Called.

On August 14 I called a conference of the governors of the most acutely affected States, and as a result of its conclusions I appointed a national committee comprising the heads of the important Federal agencies under the chairmanship of the Secretary of Agriculture. The governors in turn appointed State committees representative of the farmers, bankers, business men, and the Red Cross, and subsidiary committees have been established in most of the acutely affected counties. Railway rates were reduced on feed and live stock in and out of the drought areas, and over 50,000 cars of such products have been transported under these reduced rates. The Red Cross established a preliminary fund of $5,000,000 for distress relief purposes and established agencies for its administration in each county. Of this fund less than $500,000 has been called for up to this time as the need will appear more largely during the winter. The Federal Farm Loan Board has extended its credti facilities, and the Federal Farm Board has given financial assistance to all affected cooperatives.

In order that the Government may meet its full obligation toward our countrymen in distress through no fault of their own, I recommend that an appropriation should be made to the Department of Agriculture to be loaned for the purpose of seed and feed for animals. Its application should as hitherto in such loans be limited to a gross amount to any one individual, and secured upon the crop.

The Red Cross can relieve the cases of individual distress by the sympathetic assistance of our people.

Finances of Government.

I shall submit the detailed financial position of the Government with recommendations in the usual budget message. I will at this time, however, mention that the budget estimates of receipts and expenditures for the current year were formulated by the Treasury and the Budget Bureau at a time when it was impossible to forecast the severity of the business depression and have been most seriously affected by it. At that time a surplus of about $123,000,000 was estimated for this fiscal year and tax reduction which affected the fiscal year to the extent of $75,000,000 was authorized by the Congress, thus reducing the estimated surplus to about $48,000,000.

Closely revised estimates now made by the Treasury and the Bureau of the Budget of the tax, postal and other receipts for the current fiscal year indicate a decrease of about $430,000,000 from the estimate of a year ago, of which about $75,000,000 is due to tax reduction, leaving about $355,000,000 due to the depression. Moreover, legislation enacted by Congress subsequent to the submission of the budget enlarging Federal construction work to expand employment and for increase in veterans' services and other items, have increased expenditures during the current fiscal year by about $225,000,000.

Thus the decrease of $430,000,000 in revenues and the increase of $225,000,000 in expenditures adversely change the original budget situation by about $655,000,000. This sum is offset by the original estimated surplus a year ago of about $123,000,000, by the application of $185,000,000 of interest payments upon the foreign debt to current expenditures, by arrangements of the Farm Board through repayments, &c., in consequence of which they reduced their net cash demands upon the Treasury by $100,000,000 in this period, and by about $67,000,000 economies and deferments brought about in the Government, thus reducing the practical effect of the change in the situation to an estimated deficit of about $180,000,000 for the present fiscal year. I shall make suggestions for handling the present-year deficit in the budget message, but I do not favor encroachment upon the statutory reduction of the public debt.

While it will be necessary in public interest to further increase expenditures during the current fiscal year in aid to unemployment by speeding up construction work and aid to the farmers affected by the drought, I can not emphasize too strongly the absolute necessity to defer any other plans for increase of Government expenditures. The budget for 1932 fiscal year indicates estimated expenditure of about $4,054,000,000, including postal defict. The receipts are estimated at about $4,085,000,000 if the temporary tax reduction of last year be discontinued, leaving a surplus of only about $30,000,000. Most rigid economy is therefore necessary to avoid increase in taxes.

National Defense.

Our Army and Navy are being maintained at a high state of efficiency, under officers of high training and intelligence, supported by a devoted personnel of the rank and file. The London naval treaty has brought important economies in the conduct of the Navy. The Navy Department will lay before the committees of the Congress recommendations for a program of authorization of new construction which should be initiated in the fiscal year of 1932.

Legislation Is Urged.

This is the last session of the Seventy-first Congress. During its previous sittings it has completed a very large amount of important legislation, notably: The establishment of the Federal Farm Board; fixing congressional reapportionment; revision of the tariff, including the flexible provisions and a reorganization of the Tariff Commission; reorganization of the Radio Commission; reorganization of the Federal Power Commission; expansion of Federal prisons; reorganization of parole and probation system in Federal prisons; expansion of veterans' hospitals; establishment of disability allowances to veterans; consolidation of veteran activities; consolidation and strengthening of prohibition enforcement activities in the Department of Justice; organization of a Narcotics Bureau; large expansion of rivers and harbors improvements; substantial increase in Federal highways; enlargement of public buildings construction program; and the ratification of the London naval treaty.

The Congress has before it legislation partially completed in the last sitting in respect to Muscle Shoals, bus regulation, relief of congestion in the courts, reorganization of border patrol in prevention of smuggling, law enforcement in the District of Columbia and other subjects.

It is desirable that these measures should be completed.

The short session does not permit of extensive legislative programs, but there are a number of questions which, if time does not permit action, I recommend should be placed in consideration by the Congress, perhaps through committees cooperating in some instances with the Federal departments, with view to preparation for subsequent action. Among them are the following subjects:

Electrical Power.

I have in a previous message recommended effective regulation of interstate electrical power. Such regulation should preserve the independence and responsibility of the States.

Railways.

We have determiend upon a national policy of consolidation of the railways as a necessity of more stable and more economically operated transportation. Further legislation is necessary to facilitate such consolidation. In the public interest we should strengthen the railways that they may meet our future needs.

Antitrust Laws.

I recommend that the Congress institute an inquiry into some aspects of the economic working of these laws. I do not favor repeal of the Sherman act. The prevention of monopolies is of most vital public importance. Competition is not only the basis of protection to the consumer but is the incentive to progress. However, the interpretation of these laws by the courts, the changes in business, especially in the economic effects upon those enterprises closely related to the use of the natural resources of the country, make such an inquiry advisable. The producers of these materials assert that certain unfortunate results of wasteful and destructive use of these natural resources, together with a destructive competition which impoverishes both operator and worker can not be remedied because of the prohibitive interpertation of the antitrust laws.

The well-known condition of the bituminous coal industry is an illustration. The people have a vital interest in the conservation of their natural resources; in the prevention of wasteful practices; in conditions of destructive competition which may impoverish the producer and the wage earner; and they have an equal interest in maintaining adequate competition. I therefore suggest that an inquiry be directed especially to the effect of the workings of the antitrust laws in these particular fields to determine if these evils can be remedied without sacrifice of the fundamental purpose of these laws.

Capital-Gains Tax.

It is urged by many thoughtful citizens that the peculiar economic effect of the income tax on so-called capital gains at the present rate is to enhance speculative inflation and likewise impede business recovery. I believe this to be the case and I recommend that a study be made of the economic effects of this tax and of its relation to the general structure of our income tax law.

Immigration.

There is need for revision of our immigration laws upon a more limited and more selective basis, flexible to the needs of the country. Under conditions of current unemployment it is obvious that persons coming to the United States seeking work would likely become either a direct or indirect public charge. As a temporary measure the officers issuing visas to immigrants have been, in pursuance of the law, instructed to refuse visas to applicants likely to fall into this class. As a result the visas issued have decreased from an average of 24,000 per month prior to restrictions to a rate of about 7,000 during the last month. These are largely preferred persons under the law. Visas from Mexico are about 250 per month compared to about 4,000 previous to restrictions. The whole subject requires exhaustive reconsideration.

Deportation of Alien Criminals.

I urge the strengthening of our deportation laws so as to more fully rid ourselves of criminal aliens. Furthermore, thousands of persons have entered the country in violation of the immigration laws. The very method of their entry indicates their objectionable character, and our law-abiding foreign-born residents suffer in consequence. I recommend that Congress provide methods of strengthening the Government to correct this abuse.

Postoffice.

Due to deferment of Government building over many years, previous administrations had been compelled to enter upon types of leases for secondary facilities in large cities, some of which were objectionable as representing too high a return upon the value of the property. To prevent the occasion for further uneconomic leasing I recommend that the Congress authorize the building by the Government of its own facilities.

Veterans.

The Nation has generously expanded its care for veterans. The consolidation of all veterans' activities into the veterans' administration has produced substantial administrative economies. The consolidation also brings emphasis to the inequalities in service and allowances. The whole subject is under study by the administrator, and I recommend it should also be examined by the committees of the Congress.

Social Service.

I urge further consideration by the Congress of the recommendations I made a year ago looking to the development through temporary Federal aid of adequate State and local services for the health of children and the further stamping out of communicable disease, particularly in the rural sections. The advance of scientific discovery, methods, and social thought imposes a new vision in these matters. The drain upon the Federal Treasury is comparatively small. The results both economic and moral are of the utmost importance.

General.

It is my belief that after the passing of this depression, when we can examine it in retrospect, we shall need to consider a number of other questions as to what action may be taken by the Government to remove possible governmental influences which make for instability and to better organize mitigation of the effect of depression. It is as yet too soon to constructively formulate such measures.

There are many administrative subjects, such as departmental reorganization, extension of the civil service, readjustment of the postal rates, &c., which at some appropriate time require the attention of the Congress.

Foreign Relations.

Our relations with foreign countries have been maintained upon a high basis of cordiality and good will.

During the past year the London naval pact was completed, approved by the Senate, and ratified by the governments concerned. By this treaty we have abolished competition in the building of warships, have established the basis of parity of the United States with the strongest of foreign powers, and have accomplished a substantial reduction in war vesels.

During the year there has been an extended political unrest in the world. Asia continues in disturbed condition, and revolutions have taken place in Brazil, Argentina, Peru, and Bolivia. Despite the jeopardy to our citizens and their property which naturally arises in such circumstances, we have, with the cooperation of the governments concerned, been able to meet all such instances without friction.

We have resumed normal relations with the new governments of Brazil, Argentina, Peru, and Bolivia immediately upon evidence that they were able to give protection to our citizens and their property, and that they recognized their international obligations.

A commission which was supported by the Congress has completed its investigation and reported upon our future policies in respect to Haiti and proved of high value in securing the acceptance of these policies. An election has been held and a new government established. We have replaced our high commissioner by a minister and have begun the gradual withdrawal of our activities with view to complete retirement at the expiration of the present treaty in 1935.

A number of arbitration and conciliation treaties have been completed or negotiated during the year and will be presented for approval by the Senate.

I shall, in a special message, lay before the Senate the protocols covering the statutes of the World Court which have been revised to accord with the sense of previous Senate reservations. HERBERT HOOVER.

The White House, Dec. 2, 1930.

Hoover's Message Urges Quick Relief, Economies

Among the many things mentioned by President Hoover in his message to Congress for the present short session, he stressed the importance of the following:

Immediate acceleration of all Federal construction during the next six months. For this purpose he requested an emergency appropriation of up to $150,000,000.

Continued operation of "rigid economy" within the Government because of an estimated deficit of $180,000,000 this year and a surplus of only $30,000,000 in sight for 1932, even with discontinuance of the 1 per cent tax reduction on 1929 incomes.

Completion of legislation on Muscle Shoals, relief of court congestion, reorganization of the border patrol to prevent smuggling, regulation of motor buses and law enforcement in the Capital.

Need of authority for large advance on Federal highway improvements as a means of aiding States in combatting unemployment.

That because it is apparent that unemployment will continue through the winter "we have as a Nation a definite duty that no deserving person in our country suffers from hunger or cold."

That because the problem which confronts the Nation is an increase in employment within the next six months, plans and commitments which do not tend to bring results within that period are unwarranted.

Going beyond the short session, the President expressed the hope that among other things there would be legislation on the following subjects:

To regulate interstate electrical power; to facilitate the consolidation of railroads; to revise laws on immigration and adjust allowances to veterans.

The President also urged strengthening of the laws of deportation to aid of ridding the country of criminal aliens.

Other matters called to the attention of Congress included authorization of secondary Federal postal buildings to eliminate "further uneconomic leasing;" an inquiry into taxes on capital gains; a study of the workings of antitrust laws and development of State and local child health services through temporary Federal aid.

Prohibition and the Law Enforcement Commission's work were not mentioned by Mr. Hoover.

NEW COUNTY BOARD SELECTS ITS STAFF

Also Appoints Constables for Prince Georges; Sheriff Sworn.

WOMAN SEEKS DIVORCE

The new Prince Georges County Commissioners met yesterday and devoted their first meeting to organizing and appointment of county officials and constables. Walter M. Grimes, only member of the old board to be reelected, was chosen president.

James S. Heal, of Beltsville, received appointment as clerk to the board. He replaces Brice Bowie, who was holding this office when chosen county treasurer at the last election. Miss Catherine A. Ridgely was reappointed as assistant clerk.

The board chose Clyde Baden as clerk to the supervisors of assessments, and appointed John Robert as temporary assistant transfer clerk, to hold office until January 1. The new board will retain M. Hampton Magruder as its counsel.

The following constables were appointed and their districts determined by the commissioners: Fendall Gray, Spaulding; Henry B. Brady, Aquasco; Ralph W. Brown, Chillum; J. Raymond Coomes, Lanham; Earle Blackwell, Seat Pleasant; W. C. Hanson, jr., Hyattsville, and Roger L. Oursler, Surrattsville.

W. Curtis Hopkins, the new sheriff, was inducted into office yesterday, and immediately swore in Tom Garrison as his chief deputy. Other deputies have not been chosen.

Alleging that her husband "has conducted a systematic campaign of nagging and abuse" toward her, Mrs. Grace C. Ellis, of Takoma Park, yesterday filed suit for limited divorce in the Circuit Court. She also charges he has mistreated her on several occasions.

John O. Ellis, the husband, according to the petition, has an income of $300 a month as patent examiner and adviser. She asks allmony pending the hearing.

They were married in 1916 and have two children, Jack, 13, and Richard, 9. Mrs. Ellis asks the court to grant her their custody.

Assurance that paving the lower end of Ravenswood avenue to give that street an outlet to Rhode Island avenue would be done was given by the mayor and council of Hyattsville at a recent meeting. Waldo Burnside, corporation counsel, was instructed to draw up an ordinance authorizing the work.

This action probably will be approved at the meeting of the town fathers Monday, and work can begin immediately. It is expected the job can be finished this winter as a macadam pavement, which can be laid in cold weather, has been specified.

A sidewalk along the Baltimore boulevard, between Avalon and Carroll avenue, also was authorized, and a curb will be built in front of the Katz automobile accessory store, near Johnson avenue.

James Phillip Daly, of Massachusetts avenue near Fourth street northwest, will face charges of driving while drunk and reckless driving in county police court at Hyattsville today. He was arrested after his auto was said to have mounted the sidewalk and struck Joan Jewell, 4 years, old, who was playing near his home in Mount Rainier.

Fanned by the high wind, fire yesterday destroyed the home of Charles E. Gale in East Riverdale. Mr. Gale, his wife and their 16-year-old daughter were able to save only a few clothes and a canary bird. Three volunteer firemen were injured as they fought the flames.

C. O. Taylor, of the Riverdale Heights Department, suffered severe cuts on the arm. Chesley W. Scott strained an arm. Norwood Glading, of the Riverdale company, was overcome by smoke but was revived. The damage, which will amount to $4,500, was covered by insurance.

County Policeman Earle Blackwell, who investigated reports that a fire at Capitol Heights was incendiary, said last night that the flames were set by small boys playing in the house. They are relatives of the owner, so no action was taken. Damage in this case amounted to about $500.

Making their third descent on Riverdale road homes near Bladensburg within two weeks, thieves broke into the home of Mrs. Edward Radtke. Their loot consisted of $5 and a pistol.

Captain of Steamship Indicted in Desertion

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Capt. Rolf Boe, a steamship captain, was indicted today on charges of deserting his wife and children, after his wife, Mrs. Ebba Boe, a radio singer, appeared before the grand jury in a case said to involve a conflict of jurisdictions in divorce.

Mrs. Boe was deserted by her husband in 1928, she charged. Capt. Boe has been released on bail at Mobile, Ala., but steps are being taken to bring him back to Baltimore for trial.

Rites Held for Jacob Harden.

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 2 (Special).—Jacob Harden, 84 years old, died Sunday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Willison, Willowbrook road, where he had been ill for several weeks. He had resided with his son, Benjamin Harden, of Dilley street, for nine years, since the death of his wife. He also leaves another daughter, Mrs. Thomas McCoy, of this city. The funeral was held this afternoon, with burial in Greenmount Cemetery.

$500,000 SUIT FILED BY WEST VIRGINIAN

FALSE ARREST CHARGED

Cleveland, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Zebulon Davis, wealthy Cleveland cement manufacturer, and seven others were named defendants today in a $500,000 damage suit filed in Federal Court by Robert C. Mason, of Fairmount, W. Va., alleging conspiracy, false arrest, false imprisonment and assault.

Davis denied the charges in toto. The defendants, besides Davis, are George D. Hurlock, former Cleveland mining promoter; Edward J. Buettner, William G. Henne and Martin Herbst, all of Youngstown, Ohio; Louis Mack, Chicago attorney; Arthur W. O'Leary, supposed detective for Mack, and Thomas Featherstone, a Chicago policeman.

The suit asserts Mason was forced to leave Cleveland with his wife and son, register at a Chicago hotel, and was threatened there with death by several men, one of whom was a Chicago policeman in uniform.

Mason alleged that under the threats he was forced to turn over money and securities which his attorney, George E. Darmstatter, said amounted to $250,000 in cash and notes. The damages are sought for alleged loss of health and of the money and securities.

Davis said there is a connection between the suit and the $20,000,000 purchase of a copper mine at Copper Creek, Alaska. Backed by an English syndicate, Mason bought the mine from Hurlock, Davis said. "I never harmed Mason," he added, "I invested in the mine."

The mine investment was Davis' second big loss, he said, but he declined to state how much.

COURT ACTION ASKED TO GET WATER FUND

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Phone: Clarendon 500. Clarendon, Va.

Undiscouraged by failure of the county board of supervisors to allow the remainder of the funds obtained from annexation proceedings, and now in the Jefferson district road fund, to be transferred to the water fund, Harry C. Saffell, who led the fight before the board of supervisors, stated last night that he will carry the issue to the circuit court at the December session, which convenes next week. Mr. Saffell said he would take this action on the advice of Supervisor B. M. Hedrick, Arlington district, the only member of the board who supported him in his efforts.

With some sections of the county facing a serious condition through financial inability to extend the water lateral mains, Saffell offered a resolution asking the board to rescind its previous action, in giving Jefferson district $267,642.96 out of the $502,500 received from the City of Alexandria, as a result of annexation.

Aside from the sum given the road fund, $180,000 was given the county school board, to retire school bonds within the district, and $54,857.04 to the county fund. The distribution was made upon the recommendation of a committee appointed by the board, consisting of County School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp, County Engineer C. L. Kinnier, and Commonwealth Attorney William C. Gloth.

At the time the recommendation was made, Chairman Edward Duncan, and Supervisor E. C. Turnburke voted for its adoption with Supervisor B. M. Hedrick voting in the negative, on the grounds that the money allocated to the Jefferson district road fund should have been paid into the county fund, in the interests of the entire county.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy of the Circuit Court will be asked for an interpretation of the allocation, and an effort will be made to have at least $90,000, which remains in the road fund, transferred to the water fund.

"I believe that an injustice has been done to all of the residents of both Washington and Arlington districts and I propose to fight this to the end," Saffell declared.

The State Corporation Commission has issued an order suspending the proposed revision in gas rates in Arlington County by the Rosslyn Gas Co. until February 1, and has set January 20, 1931, as the date for holding a public hearing at Richmond, according to an announcement last night by Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Gloth.

The action by the State Corporation Commission, Gloth stated, was based not only on his request, but upon a protest by the Lyon Park Citizens Association, which was filed by its president, Arthur Orr.

The order shows that the revised rate schedules were filed by the Rosslyn Gas Co., a subsidiary of the Washington Gas Light Co., on October 29.

Orr states that an effort will be made to have the hearing held in the Arlington County Courthouse.

Having ordered the Rosslyn Gas Co. to suspend all operations in laying gas extension mains at its last meeting, the county board of supervisors will have the matter before them again at a special meeting today.

G. A. G. Wood, president of the Washington Gas Co., with its vice president, F. A. Woodhead, will be in attendance.

Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Gloth stated last night that he has requested Calvin Kephart, secretary of the public utility commission of the county, to attend the meeting.

The Arlington County Monarch Club will hold its weekly luncheon meeting tomorrow at 12 o'clock at the Ashton Heights Woman's Clubhouse.

With distribution of $125,384.81 by the banks of Arlington County yesterday, in Christmas saving checks, good cheer has been brought to more than 3,000 persons, the holders of these checks.

The People's State Bank, of Cherrydale, with branches in Ballston and Arlington, reports the largest amount distributed, a total of $50,293.12. The other banks reporting were: Arlington Trust Co., Rosslyn, $33,583.44; Clarendon Trust Co., $25,395.00, and the Falls Church Bank, $16,113.25.

Christmas saving clubs for 1931 have now been opened by all the banks.

County Treasurer E. Wade Ball has announced that a penalty of 5 per cent will be added to all real estate and personal property tax bills which are unpaid on and after Friday, December 5.

Indorsing the present campaign for the sale of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals, State Senator Frank L. Ball, in a statement issued last night, said: "It should be looked upon as a great privilege to purchase and use the little tuberculosis seals, money from which is used for the prevention of consumption and relief of suffering caused by this disease.

"The returns for the seals bought in the county mean money will be available for use in the county. It is wise, therefore, to purchase your seals from the local organization."

The committee reports that last year a total of $1,738 was raised from the sale of the seals, which made it possible to hold special clinics under the direction of Dr. H. A. Latane, of Alexandria.

Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, in his annual report for the year said:

"The most outstanding public health work done in Arlington County during the year was the intensive campaign waged against tuberculosis—both adult and the childhood types of the disease."

The report shows that 18 clinics were held, 278 persons examined, 16 active cases found, 54 suspicious cases found, 10 arrested cases found, 63 contacts found, 84 suffering from other diseases, and 65 cases not previously under a doctor's care.

The Arlington Rotary Club will hold its weekly meeting tomorrow at the Washington Golf and Country Club at 12:30 o'clock.

Plans are being completed by the ladies of the Clarendon Methodist Church for their annual bazaar, which will be held in the vacant store near Clarendon avenue and Wilson boulevard Friday and Saturday of this week.

The Washington Post's editorial on November 30, entitled: "Washington Parkway," was commended by a unanimous vote of the Arlington County Civic Federation, at its meeting held last night in the Lyon Park Community House.

Upon motion of L. C. McNamar a copy of the editorial was spread upon the minutes of the federation, as a part of its official record.

The action resulted following the report of the recent meeting held before the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce, at which time Hugh E. Kirby, representing the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce, and Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, explained at length the provisions of the Capper-Cramton bill, which provides for the construction of the George Washington Memorial Parkway, extending on the Virginia shores of the ePtomac River from Mount Vernon to Great Falls.

In concluding his reports, Mr. McNemar read the editorial in which was pointed out that "it could not be considered conceivable that Virginia would lose the opportunity of having a park to be maintained by the Federal Government by refusing to ratify the act of Congress authorizing the development."

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

President Hoover's message to Congress sounds the note of courage, confidence and progress in the return to prosperity. It analyzes the forces of depression, finds that they lie outside of the United States, and that conditions in this country are auspicious for recovery and enlarged activity. The country is stronger than ever in resources, skill and equipment. Recovery can be expedited by the cooperation of all citizens and all organizations of government.

Mr. Hoover's specific recommendation for Federal cooperation in the universal task of rehabilitation is based upon the idea of speeding up public works in order to provide employment. He finds that there is a limit to which the Government can go in expanding its program. He would not extend the program beyond the next six months, and he would not make extravagant appropriations which would necessitate an increase in taxation. All that can be usefully employed, in addition to appropriations already made, is $100,000,000 or $150,000,000. More than this would probably require a tax increase. The total expenditure upon public works of all kinds, including the proposed appropriation, would amount to $650,000,000 during the next twelve months. These public works consist of improvements in waterways, harbors, public buildings, highways and airways, besides naval construction, flood-control work and loans to shipbuilders.

For drought relief the President asks for an appropriation, to be loaned by the Department of Agriculture to farmers for the purchase of seed and animal feed.

Many Democrats have given a pledge that they will cooperate with the party in power in the enactment of legislation designed to relieve unemployment and the drought sufferers. There is no reason why the proposals of the President should be subjected to partisan or sectional opposition. Delay in granting the relief proposed is dangerous, in view of the rapidly increasing rigors of winter. The country expects Congress to act promptly in this emergency.

The business depression caused a shrinkage of Federal revenue amounting to $355,000,000. This decrease, together with increased appropriations allotted to unemployment relief and veterans' services, has resulted in a deficit of $180,000,000 for the current fiscal year. The President in his budget message will suggest methods for dealing with this deficit. He opposes a reduction in the annual installments upon the public debt. It may be inferred that his budget message will recommend that the temporary income tax of last year be discontinued.

Taking into consideration Mr. Hoover's reminder that "most rigid economy is necessary to avoid increase in taxes," together with his statement that "the London treaty has brought important economies in the conduct of the Navy," it is needless to say that the administration program for naval construction will be carefully scrutinized by Congress. Public opinion does not favor economy at the expense of national security. Besides, reasonable naval construction at this time would be an effective means of distributing employment through many industries. If the Navy Department program for 1932 should fail to provide for new work that will push the United States Navy toward parity with the British navy there will surely be a vigorous controversy in Congress.

In one sentence Mr. Hoover opens up an immense field. He recommends "effective regulation of interstate electrical power." Congress should take steps to occupy this empty field of authority. The Federal Government must exert its power to regulate interstate operations of the so-called utilities.

The modification of the antitrust laws in such manner as to permit the orderly development of natural resources, while insuring adequate competition, is a subject which should be studied, in the opinion of the President. He also suggests a study of the economic effect of the income tax upon capital gains, with a view to repeal of this tax.

Reconsideration of the immigration laws, for the purpose of restricting immigration, is recommended. Legislation proposing to put a stop to immigration for the time being has already been prepared. The President also recommends legislation which will give the Government a more effective method of deporting criminal aliens.

Mr. Hoover has refrained from making recommendations for legislation that is not urgent, although he calls attention to several important matters that should be dealt with in due time. He confines his recommendations, however, to legislation that is urgently needed, and which ought to command the support of all parties in Congress.

The calm and confident tone of the message, the well-digested proposals for dealing with the effects of depression, and the exclusion of controversial matters give this state paper extraordinary force. It accurately gauges the opinion of the people and may be safely taken by Congress as an expression of their will.

NOT THE HOWELL BILL.

President Hoover mentioned the District only casually in his annual message. In listing measures "partially completed in the last sitting" he included the proposal for better law enforcement in the District of Columbia, adding: "It is desirable that these measures should be completed." The statement echoes his recommendation of a year ago for enactment of a law enforcement measure for the District. President Hoover does not mention the Howell prohibition bill by name, but this is the only law enforcement measure for the District that is pending before Congress.

The Howell bill has been a bone of contention ever since it was introduced. Harsh and unconstitutional in its provisions, certain important changes in it were suggested by Attorney General Mitchell when it was sent to the Department of Justice for examination. Senator Howell, however, refused to accept the amendments suggested by the Attornel General, and the bill, as pending, is in substantially the form in which it was originally written. It provides that all Washington policemen shall have authority to enforce the prohibition laws, an entirely proper provision to which no objection can be raised, but it also authorizes the issuance of search warrants upon the mere suspicion that liquor had been delivered to or was being delivered from a private dwelling. This section unquestionably would be held unconstitutional by the courts.

Congress has the exclusive authority to legislate for the District. It is the duty of Congress to provide local authorities with appropriate machinery for the enforcement of the law. But if Congress were to single out the District of Columbia as a test ground for harsh, fanatical, unconstitutional prohibition legislation, as it would if it were to follow the dictates of Senator Howell, the injustice would be thwarted by the courts. No law can be made, even in the District of Columbia, which invades the constitutional rights of the citizen. It is preposterous to assume that President Hoover, in recommending law enforcement legislation, had in mind legislation that would be promptly nullified by the judicial power.

SENATOR DAVIS SEATED.

The attempt of Senator Nye and a small group of Senate radicals to prevent Senator James J. Davis from taking his seat was soon smashed yesterday by combined Democratic and Republican votes. No grounds for opposing the seating of Senator Davis have ever been found. The demand made by Senator Nye to deny to Pennsylvania its equal suffrage in the Senate, in order to suit his convenience in making another muck-raking expedition, was very properly opposed by both sides of the chamber.

The Senate action ought to have a good effect in discouraging the malicious activities of senators who attempt to set themselves up as censors over the people in their selection of candidates for office. The public long ago condemned senatorial invasion of the right of the States to elect senators of their own choice. The regulation of primary expenditures is a prerogative of the States, and not a duty of the Senate. When a senator tries to establish the rule that a Senate committee can pass judgment upon the selection of party candidates he is justly subject to the chastisement which the Senate administered yesterday to Mr. Nye.

BILLINGS AND MOONEY.

Sympathizers with communism have been busy for months organizing propaganda to support the plea of Warren K. Billings for a pardon. Every effort has been made to create a radical issue out of the imprisonment of Billings and Thomas J. Mooney for bombing a preparedness day parade in 1916, in which 10 persons were killed and 40 injured. But the California Supreme Court will not be stampeded.

By a vote of six to one the court has held that Billings is not entitled to pardon. The law provides that, since Billings has been twice convicted of a felony, the governor may act only on recommendation of the court. Gov. Young has announced his intention of dealing with both the defendants in accordance with the court's advice.

The court did not hold a formal hearing. The justices investigated every angle of the case, without the restrictions of ordinary judicial procedure. In spite of all the rumors of perjured testimony, new evidence for the defendants, and the steady stream of propaganda from radical organizations, the court found that the status of the case had not been changed. The defendants were duly convicted. Nothing to establish a doubt of their guilt has been presented.

The recent investigation of the case has played into the hands of Communists and other radicals of every stripe, who are trying to tear down the fundamental institutions of this country. They have seized upon this case as an excuse for spreading falsehoods against the courts. The effect of their campaign is to make heroes of two convicts who are serving sentences for a dastardly crime, and thus to encourage violence against the Government. In the light of the supreme court's decision, this agitation takes on the aspect of a malicious and subversive attack upon the administration of justice.

AMERICAN COLLEGE AIMS.

Dr. Abraham Flexner, distinguished lecturer at Oxford, recently pictured American universities as "losing their sense of values," as increasing their facilities but needlessly cheapening, vulgarizing and mechanizing themselves. The public, according to Dr. Flexner, is utterly at sea as to what purposes the colleges serve. He accuses American universities of "selling out" intellectuality in favor of stenography and toe-dancing.

Some American educators retort by describing Dr. Flexner as a pedagogical diehard. They put up a stout defense of their policy of giving greater attention to business, the professions and vocational preparation. It is frankly admitted that the pursuit of purely intellectual studies is only one purpose of universities in this country. Education here is designed to help young people make the most of their lives, whether or not they intend to devote themselves to purely intellectual pursuits.

Dr. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, chancellor of New York University, makes himself champion of the American viewpoint in his annual report to the university council. He speaks of "not wanting to waste a single child," of "pushing them on to the highest education of which they are capable," and of the prominent place which vocational and practical training has come to occupy in the American system of education in the last decade. Instead of closing university doors to the masses clamoring for higher education, he advises faculties to prepare for greater enrollments. Rather than neglect of practical training, he urges adjustment of students to the type of vocation or intellectual endeavor for which they are best qualified.

During the last three decades, Dr. Brown reports, the population of this country has increased only 58 per cent while enrollment in high schools has risen 521 per cent and college attendance 417 per cent. The greatest increase has been in the schools of business, economics, mining, engineering and the professions. This fact seems to have a definite relationship to the supremacy of America in the fields of industry and commerce. Why should not a nation teach its youth how to provide and enjoy greater economic advantages? The masses have no craving for the arts. But is that any reason why they should not be taught how to make a better living?

FORECASTING BUSINESS

From the Topeka Capital.

Walter S. Gifford, the brilliant young president of the American Telephone Co., in an address in Massachusetts predicts that America is about to enter a period of prosperity on a firmer and more substantial basis than at any time in the past, a prosperity on an unequaled scale. Business leadership, he stated, is prepared to build in the light of knowledge of conditions and abilities such as never before existed.

In the Saturday Evening Post Mr. Gifford enlarges on this subject. He is convinced that business management can by far-sighted policies control business cycles to the extent of averting severe depressions. Even at this time—when it is too late to take measures of prevention—much has been accomplished, he declares, in mitigating a depression. This is not only by cooperative efforts of Government and private industry, of which much has been said, but because of the fact that in spite of the speculative orgy of 1928-29, there were, in fact, no swollen inventories that had to be deflated nor artificially marked-up prices of goods.

Severe as the depression has been, it might have been worse. It might have been accompanied by panics, such as were features of great business reversals of the past. Unemployment might have been more extensive than it has been. Commenting on Mr. Gifford's article, the New York Times says on this point: "The importance of this consideration—something new in a forced period of readjustment—will probably be better recognized when the hysterical stage of the existing trade depression has passed."

A striking feature of Mr. Gifford's article is his reference to a chart of business ups and downs used by the A. T. & T. organization itself. It has for many years made surveys of business conditions and anticipating business growth in leading cities of the country. Its general chart not only pictures the past course of business, carrying it up to date, but has been valuable as indicating the immediate future. Mr. Gifford cites the chart of the probable trend of business as of May last year, which showed, to quote the A. T. & T. president, "that a general business slump was about to begin, and that it would last through 1930."

The depression, therefore, was foreseen and forecast six months before the stock market smash. Yet the public heard little of it. On this important matter Mr. Gifford remarks that the forecaster "knows that to make a gloomy prophecy in public will earn for him the dislike of the business world." Nobody aspires to the sinister reputation of a Cassandra of business. Moreover, when times seem to be excellent few care to take a chance on warning of disaster soon to come, even though satisfied that it is warranted.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THOSE COMFORTING MAXIMS.

"Blind pigs sometimes an acorn find."
"Not always to the swift the race."
Maxims like these oft come to mind
When falls a champion from his place.
But paste this motto on the wall:
The quitter never wins at all.

"Fools rush in where angels fear to tread!"
"Comes times when ignorance is bliss!"
For countless years have losers said
Skill can not hurt whom luck would kiss.
But stick this motto o'er the shelf:
Luck helps the man who helps himself.

The blind pig whining in despair
And staying idly in the sty
Would never find an acorn there.
He must get out where acorns lie.
When wise men halt and fools advance—
The fools are giving luck a chance.

"He got the breaks!" the loser cries.
"The other chap had all the luck!"
But listening to the wails and sighs,
I think he also had the pluck.
And for myself this sign I make:

It Isn't Charity If He Wants a Dollar's Worth of Gratitude

By ROBERT QUILLEN

"AFTER all I have done for them, they never show the least sign of gratitude!"

How often you hear that! It is the common complaint of people who expect pay for their benevolences.

Such people are not charitable. They have no understanding of the generous spirit that prompts other people to do a kindness and forget it. When they give an alms, they are not content with the momentary glow of conscious generosity that rewards them. They demand an oral expression of gratitude. They require the beneficiary of their bounty to confess by humble word and servile manner that he is an inferior. They strip him of the last poor remnant of his pride to feed their vanity. And forever thereafter they expect him to remember, as they do, the debt of gratitude he owes.

To complain that gratitude is lacking is to confess that you expected it. To say that you expected it is to confess that you did not give an alms but merely attempted to purchase your money's worth of gratitude to feed your vanity.

To demand gratitude is to drive a harder bargain than Shylock's, for he asked no more than his pound of flesh and left the soul unscarred.

"I made the fellow what he is, and now he has turned against me."

That is a common complaint, also—usually coupled with some reference to the folly of warming a viper in one's bosom.

Like the other it confesses an unsatisfied vanity, but it also confesses that the bountiful one has made himself an unbearable nuisance.

A merchant who has need of a clerk unwittingly hires a genius. The genius renders a service worth more than his weekly wage. His efforts double the business. His pay is not doubled, however, and in time he is lured away by a rival establishment that offers the pay he deserves.

Does the merchant blame himself for the loss of a valuable servant? Not if he is human.

"I picked him up out of the gutter and made him a success," says the merchant, "and now he is working against me."

If the genius ever felt gratitude for the wages he so thoroughly earned, speech of that kind would purge him of it.

Does any man enjoy having another take full credit for his success? Does any one enjoy being reminded of a favor accepted long ago? It isn't possible to love a benefactor who demands repayment again and again and never marks the account closed.

Gratitude is a decent thing, if there is reason for it and it isn't the servile flattery of the professional beggar; but to demand gratitude as the price of charity or justice is to demand a bribe for decency.

PRO AND CON

Various Aspects of Political Issues Discussed by the Press.

Factions Rule the Senate.
Chicago Tribune.

Party government in the Senate is more of a theory than a fact. The majority party loses its majority in nearly all questions which seriously touch its alleged doctrines. Possibly the fiction that the Republican party can include Mr. Norris and Mr. Fess, Mr. Borah and Mr. Bingham does something to hold off the recognition that the Senate actually is organized by blocs and that party responsibility is gone, but it is fiction. If keeping it up will get the party government system back on its feet again after an indefinite period it may be worth cherishing. At present the Senate is a volatile assemblage dominated by individuals who know what they want and who shift their connections according to their addictions. The two-party system is a three-party system in the Senate, although not in elections, and the plain tendency is to dispose of the party and release the individual to his own caprice or determination.

Inviting Trouble.
(Philadelphia Public Ledger.)

It is true, as Mr. Snell says, that the advocates of Government ownership made great gains in the recent congressional elections. But no member of the present Congress has received a mandate for immediate action. The Senate passed the Norris Muscle Shoals bill by a vote of 45 to 23. The House passed the Reece bill, for private operation, by a vote of 187 to 135. The insurgents are counting on a change of sentiment in the House sufficient to put their bill over. This is by no means certain. But what is certain is that consideration of this measure at the coming session can result only in long and bitter debate, with a veto impending should it pass. Every day is precious in this short session. Time-consuming controversies will invite the specter of an extra session.

The fact is, the Government-ownership crowd is eager to strike while it thinks the iron is hot. Passage of its pet measure now, even if it were vetoed, would have its psychological effect on the next Congress. Republicans who yield now to the insurgents' demands are only laying up more trouble for themselves. And this applies to other measures besides Muscle Shoals.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an American, and not in my official capacity, I beg through this public letter, to correct the impression that in the Communist demonstration at the Capitol, at the opening of Congress, any Chinese supported such demonstration, with banners bearing such slogans as "Down with Chinese Exclusion."

I shall not excuse the alleged presence of Chinese at this unlawful gathering, by claiming that they were Koreans, or Filipinos, or Asiatics other than Chinese; for such a suggestion would be unfair even if it could be proved. Moscow is very cunning, and it would not be surprising if a few unworthy Chinese could be found, who would lend themselves for hire, to combat not only the interests of their 450,000,000 patriotic and law-abiding brothers, but indeed align themselves with the whole destructive movement of Communism.

The banner with the slogan "Down with Chinese Exclusion" is a clever ruse of the Soviet, to alarm the American people into believing that China is seeking to break down the exclusion laws. In fact, there is no issue at all in this regard, for the very efficient national government of China (which will compare favorably with any other government on the planet), recognizes America's right to take such steps as are necessary to protect the economic life of its citizens. The national government of China is not seeking to dictate any policy which the great American people consider to be contrary to its own domestic needs according to American judgment. Cooperation with the constitutional control of America is the aim of our national government of China, which is certain that our American people will so assist us in stabilizing constitutional government in China that, with improved Chinese economic conditions in China, it will be no longer necessary for the Chinese to migrate overseas. With the enormous virgin wealth of China, ready for development so soon as the extraterritorial treaties are abrogated, China will need every one of its hundreds of millions, and will provide for them all better at home than they can be provided for in foreign lands.

So, let it be understood that this clever ruse from Moscow has nothing whatsoever to do with any ambition of the Chinese people, who only want to be in the enjoyment of their own land, just as we Americans believe that we have a full right to the enjoyment of our own country.

PAUL LINEBARGER,
Legal Adviser, National Government of China.

By a Month's Training in Three Successive Years America's Youth Would Settle Question of Preparedness.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To one who looks hopefully toward the future of our Nation, the recent report of Gen. Summerall must give him pause, if the pacifist spirit is to prevail in the counsels of government. As a soldier of wide experience, in peace and war, he says that we should be able to muster an army of 2,000,000 within a year, if we would be prepared for any emergency that might arise, such, for instance, as that of 1917 when we were so woefully unprepared. Many who read the report immediately began to count the cost in dollars and cents which the taxpayers would have to bear, but did not compare it with what we are bearing now as a result of our unpreparedness when war was declared.

Regardless of the annual cost, in ten years this Nation could have men aplenty with preliminary training, by sending our youth to camp for a month, the summer following the eighteenth anniversary of their birth. Let this be repeated in each of the two following years and that would give them three months of military training at a time when it would cost them less than it could at any subsequent time and be not only a healthful vacation, but an opportunity to learn a few things that every citizen ought to know, that are not taught in courses anywhere else, all of which make for better citizenship. Under the hands of capable patriotic teachers each boy would learn the value of a regular life, of plain food, necessary exercise, habits of study, respect for superiors, for his mates and added respect for himself, physically and intellectually. The necessity of promptness, recognition of law and obedience would be so impressed that his deportment through life would be colored by it. There are more than 800,000 boys annually passing their eighteenth milestone. If some 60 per cent of them should be included in such a program, in four years Gen. Summerall's army could be mobilized, at once, and repeated every four years following.

Of a family of which nine generations has served this country on the field, with gun and sword, the writer eagerly supports any reasonable attempt the Government may make toward adequate preparedness.

ARTHUR GIBSON MORSE.

Wherever the Flag Floats, Thanksgiving Expresses the American Spirit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thanksgiving Day has come and gone. Many of our people may have felt that they had little for which to give thanks; others, though there was cause, gave scant heed or thought, save to pleasure; others were grateful for what had been vouchsafed them. But were there many of us who fully realized the wonderful significance of the day? In London, Paris, Warsaw, Tokyo, Hongkong; in embassy, legation, consulate, commercial agency; in "colonies" in great cities, in explorers' camps, on mountain peaks and the high seas—wheresoever the stars and stripes was flying, this day was kept. It is the Nation's mobilization of her children's souls. It is magnificent. Not another country in the world has such a one. ADA BOYD GLASSIE.

CONVICTS DESCRIBE ANTI-SOVIET GRAFT

U. S. CONCERNS ACCUSED

Moscow, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Out from Soviet jails came witnesses tonight to confirm the extensive sabotage activities of eight engineers on trial for their lives.

The three prisoners were brought into court under a heavy guard and a red soldier with a loosened pistol holster stood nearby as they testified. Although somewhat pale from their confinement, the prisoners appeared well-fed and showed no indications of harsh treatment on the part of the secret police to induce them to testify.

Further details of the extensive sabotage were given by the witnesses, Peter Krasovsky, a former engineer connected with the commissariat of railways, now serving a ten-year sentence for counter-revolutionary activities; Vladimir Sirotsinsky, a former member of the planning commission of the supreme economic council, awaiting trial for similar activities, and S. Nmichaelenko, a minor member of the industrial party, also awaiting trial.

Earlier in the day the defendants themselves had again taken the stand and told of espionage work for officers of the French general staff and of graft collected by the engineers in connection with the plot to overthrow the government.

Information on the Soviet's war industries, they said, was transmitted to France through three mysterious French agents in Moscow identified only by the initials "K.," "A." and "R."

As for the graft, Sergei Kuprianov, one of the defendants, said the group with which he was associated got 50,000 rubles in one year as a rake-off from foreign concerns in the purchase of cotton machinery. In the old days, he said, the engineers never got any graft, as the higher-ups collected it before it trickled down that far.

Much of the graft, he said, came from American concerns, and there was a system whereby white Russians abroad got 1 per cent and the anti-Soviet engineers 4 per cent.

Leiter Dancing Class Resumes December 20

Friday Evening Dancing Class Will Start Off December 19.

The Dancing Class, the organization in which Mrs. Joseph Leiter is queen bee, will meet for the first time this season December 20, at Montgomery Country Club, where members of the class have gathered for the past few seasons for this series of parties.

Serving on the committee with Mrs. Leiter are Mrs. Henry Renning Spencer and Mrs. John F. Wilkins, although the activities of the Dancing Class have long been associated with Mrs. Leiter, in whose home on Dupont Circle the dances were held until three or more years ago. The committee then decided to hold the parties at Montgomery Club, because of the increase in membership.

Three dances are held annually. The second and third parties this season will take place January 10 and April 18.

There is another dancing group, the Friday Evening Dancing Class, which, because of the similarity in name, is often confused with Mrs. Leiter's organization. This series was founded by Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh, and the parties were held in her home in Massachusetts avenue. But the membership increased to such proportions that the dances were moved to the Willard. Included in the roster are the names of diplomatic and congressional hostesses.

The first dance will be held December 19, with the others following January 16, February 6, February 22, March 20, April 10, with a dinner dance to wind up the season May 1.

Among those who will be guests at the dinner which the English Speaking Union will give Monday evening at the Willard in honor of Sir Ronald

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

COMBATING T. B.

THE best opinion now is that there is little danger that a consumptive will infect his associates unless he is coughing and expectorating tubercle bacilli. During the World War the Army surgeons followed the plan of diagnosing consumption on the results of examining the chest and the shadows on X-ray pictures. A soldier, having been diagnosed as having tuberculosis, was sent to a hospital or invalided home, partly to protect his comrades against infection and partly to save him from a breakdown.

It is the opinion now that such soldiers did not endanger their comrades unless their sputum contained tubercle bacilli. In all probability, nearly all of the soldiers invalided for tuberculosis had had the disease, although Dr. Thayer thought that in many the diagnosis went somewhat further than the facts justified. When the stethoscope and the X-ray plate indicated the presence of tuberculosis it is altogether probable that there had been infection. The fault lay in this.

The examination did not always prove that the infection was active. Some cases of old, healed tuberculosis were included in the group. So far as the invalided men were concerned it was just as well that they were spared the strenuosity of army life. But, so far as endangering their comrades was concerned, the possibility is out of the picture, according to present day opinion.

For practical purposes quarantine and isolation measures can begin to operate when bacilli are found in the sputum and consumptives, prior to that time, can associate with other people without endangering them. Diagnosis by sputum examination is proper, so far as community protection is concerned.

Other means of diagnosis are valuable from the standpoint of the individual. There is some possibility that tubercle bacilli in pus from a cold abscess may spread the disease. But that danger is remote and is of no practical importance. Ordinary care of such discharges, including protection against flies, meets all practical needs.

The tendency of the times is toward greater protection of children from association with active tuberculosis, and greater protection against infected foods, but greater freedom in other directions.

Jane Interprets the Mode

New York, Dec. 2.

IF you would be inconspicuous at any formal gathering, wear a black evening coat, white furred, or a white ermine jacket or wrap. Romeo and Juliet, the Metropolitan Opera and me with my black velvet wrap and huge white fox fur collar!

Yes, the way to be distinctive this season is to go in for evening colors in a mild way. Black and white has become too durn smart and popular. And smart it is, and flattering, what's worse—that makes it all the harder to give it up, you see. And this charming fad will not become demode for many a season, you mark my words—so continue to wear white furs of all sorts for your evening wraps.

This being this, an occasional brown evening ensemble is a delight when properly complemented with its bronze gold, or chartreuse, or turquoise-blue accessories. A lovely brown tulle dress with a floral design of sequins all around the decolletage and scattered around the borders of its flares was recently worn at a formal affair in California, and the lovely lady wore chartreuse slippers and a couple of flowers this same color at the belt! At this same affair a brown velvet dress in a classic silhouette was rhinestone trimmed, oh, ever so little, and a brown taffeta frock had a bustle bow lined with pale pink taffeta, gold and rose brocaded.

For brown, you see, has taken on a new tone and life, and is as different as can be from the old, dull browns of a few years ago. Today's browns are alive, and that is what makes them possible colors for evening wear.

Here is an answer to every lovely lady's prayers for absolutely beautiful and brand-new Christmas gift ideas! Yes, your own Dah-ray has thought of the most lovely things, ones that you will make yourselves with your own clever fingers, and that no one will ever even remotely guess are home made. Mamzelle is roaring around to get in her word—that they're the most fun to make of anything she has ever done, and look like the handsomest products of the world's most exclusive gift shops. I mean, of course, the lamp shades, candlesticks and a radiator cover made of—of all things—crystal beads! And the instructions for making these lovely things are in this week's leaflet, which the Dare' department of The Washington Post will send you for your stamped, self-addressed envelope

We-l-l-ll, I just honestly never did see ennything quite so smart and so stroking as Martial et Armand's ensemble that I show you today. In the first place, it's black and white. Then, the dress is of satin—with the odd yoke and sleeves of white and the rest of the blouse black. And don't you adore the grouped pleating of the skirt? 'N' before we have said a millionth of all the lovely unusualness of the dress it's time to tell you about the coat! It's short enough to show the intricate skirt, is this jacket. And it's of white kid! And it has a luxurious collar and huge cuffs of black fox!

What Today Means to You

"SAGITTARIUS"

IF December 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 6 p. m. to 7 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. to 11:45 p. m. The danger period is from 8 a. m. to 10:30 a. m.

In spiritual and mental things, this date will be eventful; in material matters, almost wholly eventless. An experience will bring real self-knowledge and will act as an eye-opener. Exceptionally good time for serious study. If possible, avoid travel.

Children born on this December 3 will have thoughtful, retiring natures, and modesty will be one of their virtues. They will evince little interest in sports, but will be keen about their studies. They will be affectionate, but not demonstrative.

You have an intensely observant nature, and little of genuine interest escapes your eye. You take an amused although not an unsympathetic interest in people. You mentally caricature them. You are able to strip men and women of their silly sham veneer and to see them "in the rough." Your microscopial inspections are many times quite disconcerting and embarrassing to your victims.

The one word, thorough, describes the type and manner of your mind; no detail, large or small, is slighted. Your efficiency almost makes you a crank, and it is difficult for you to feel sufficient confidence in others to completely hand over any of your burdens, without some retaining strings.

You have many absorbing interests beside your outstanding duties, and you ride your hobbies hard. There is a little bit of the reformer, a little bit of the preacher, in you, and you are not afraid to exert your efforts, for what you consider a person's or community's good. You have very strong convictions and you have the courage to uphold them. It would be well if your tongue were a little freer from sarcasm, for you say things which hurt and rankle. You are not by instinct a bachelor or a bachelor-girl; you need a home, a mate and children for your complete happiness.

Successful people born December 3: Barbara Frietchie, the heroine of Whittier's poem.

Ellen H. S. Richards, chemist.

Phoebe Apperson Hearst, philanthropist.

John Bassett Moore, professor in international law.

Work's Radio Bridge Game

Milton C. Work's second Radio Bridge Game of the season, broadcast yesterday from Station WRC, brought together as exhibition players Mrs. Wistar Morris Chubb, of South Orange, N. J.; Mrs. John Munce, jr., of Alexandria, Va.; Christian A. Herter, of Boston, and Sidney S. Lenz, of New York.

Mr. Lenz, as Dealer, South, opened the auction with one Heart on: Spades, 8, 6, 5; Hearts, K, Q, J, 10, 6; Diamonds, K, J, 9, 7; Clubs, Q. Mrs. Chubb, West, said one Spade on: Spades, K, J, 9, 4, 3; Hearts, A, 8, 7, 4; Diamonds, A, Q, 10; Clubs, A. Her Spade bid was much sounder than a double would have been as South had bid Hearts and her own strength was predominantly in Spades. Mrs. Munce, North, went to two Hearts on: Spades, A, Q; Hearts, 9, 5, 3, 2; Diamonds, none; Clubs, K, J, 10, 8, 5, 4, 2. She had wonderful assistance for her partner's Heart bid: four trumps; the Ace-Queen doubleton of the suit bid on her right, so it was probable that no tricks would be lost in that suit; a blank Diamond suit, presumably assuring that no tricks would be lost in that suit; and a long, strong Club suit. Mr. Herter, East, passed. His hand was practically worthless, containing only: Spades, 10, 7, 2; Hearts, none; Diamonds, 8, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2; Clubs, 9, 7, 6, 3. Being blank in the adverse Heart suit was not sufficient reason for raising his partner, who had made only a following bid.

On the second round of bidding, Mr. Lenz, South, passed; Mrs. Chubb, West, bid two Spades. Four cards of the adversaries' suit being a feature of her strong hand, she was prepared to bid until she got the contract at Spades or could double Hearts safely. Mrs. Munce, North, went to three Hearts, still refraining from bidding her Clubs until she had told her partner how extremely strong her hand was for the Heart bid. Mr. Herter, East, was tempted at this point to give a raise to his partner who had shown such Spade strength, but he inferred from the vigorous North and South bidding that his partner had not many Hearts for him to ruff. He was wrong in this natural inference, but right in passing.

Mr. Lenz, South, passed; Mrs. Chubb, West, went to three Spades, hoping to get a free double of four Hearts; Mrs. Munce, North, said four Clubs; Mr. Herter, East, passed. Mr. Lenz, South, went to four Hearts, as his partner fully expected he would; Mrs. Chubb, West, doubled; and all passed.

Mrs. Chubb, West, opened the play by leading the 4 of Spades, not expecting to take any Spade tricks, in view of her partner's ominous silence, but because to lead any other suit would have been worse. Mrs. Munce, North, spread her hand for Dummy, and Mr. Lenz played from it the Queen of Spades. Mr. Herter, East, played the Deuce, and Mr. Lenz, South, the 5.

At trick two Mr. Lenz led Dummy's Deuce of Clubs, to establish that suit in Dummy, since Dummy lacked enough trumps to enable him to ruff all the losing cards he held in the closed hand. East played the Trey, Declarer the Queen, and Mrs. Chubb, West, was forced to win with the Ace. Mrs. Chubb then led the Trey of Spades, as she realized she must use every possible means to take entry cards from Dummy, to keep Declarer from running the Clubs. Dummy won with the Ace of Spades; East played the 7, Declarer the 6.

Declarer next led Dummy's King of Clubs; East played the 6; Declarer discarded the 8 of Spades; Mrs. Chubb ruffed with the 4 of Hearts. Mrs. Chubb was then in trouble for a lead. She dared not lead Diamonds away from her double tenace with no Diamonds in Dummy. She was practically certain from the bidding that Declarer held the King, while her own bidding must have shown him that she held the Ace. She knew that if she led the Queen or 10 of Diamonds Mr. Lenz would win the trick in his own hand, discarding from Dummy; whereas if she led the Ace she would simply surrender command of the suit and give Dummy a ruff. There was a chance that Mr. Lenz had the 10 of Spades, and if so, a Spade lead would force Dummy's hand. All Mrs. Chubb needed to set the contract was one more ruff, as she already was sure of three tricks—the two she already had won and the Ace of Hearts.

Therefore, to trick five, Mrs. Chubb led the King of Spades. Ordinarily a declarer takes a ruff in Dummy and a discard in closed hand whenever possible, but in this case it was more important for Mr. Lenz to keep trumps in Dummy; so he discarded from Dummy the 4 of Clubs. East played the 10 of Spades and Declarer ruffed with the 10 of Hearts, keeping his 6 spot as an entry to Dummy.

Declarer then led the King of Hearts, West played the 7, Dummy the Deuce, East the Deuce of Diamonds. Mr. Lenz continued with the Queen of Hearts, West won with the Ace, Dummy played the Trey, and East the Trey of Diamonds. Mrs. Chubb was helpless; no lead she could make could prevent Declarer from going game and contract. She led the 10 of Diamonds, which Mr. Lenz won with Dummy's 5 of Hearts. Then leading Dummy's 9 of Hearts and under playing with the 6 from his own hand, he drew the last adverse trump, and all of his Clubs were good, giving him 64 trick points, 50 for making a doubled contract, and 80 honors for his four honors in one hand. At Progressive or Duplicate, there would be an additional 125 points for making game in one deal.

Commenting on the play, Mr. Work picked out as the high point of the hand Mr. Lenz's lead of the Club from Dummy and discard of a Spade from his own hand at trick four. Had he led a Heart or discarded a Diamond, his contract would have failed. With the inevitable Spade lead to the next trick, Dummy would have been obliged to ruff, and, weakened to three trumps, further forcing would have prevented Dummy's running of Clubs.

At Contract, the bidding would have been: South, one Heart; West, two Spades; North, four Hearts; West, after two intervening passes, double. North would be justified in the jump to four, because, with a Spade bid on her right, the Ace-Queen of Spades can be counted as two assisting tricks or raises. The four Hearts coupled with a blank suit make one more raiser, the blank suit is valued as two more, and the King-Jack-10 of Clubs as another; a total of six, whereas only five raises are required to jump partner from one to four.

Questions 3 and 4 in Mr. Works's Handicap Bridge Test were based on these hands: South—SPADES, Q, 10, 9, 7; HEARTS, K, J, 5; DIAMONDS, A, Q, 9, 6; CLUBS, A, 9. North—SPADES, A, J, 8, 5; HEARTS, 9, 8; DIAMONDS, K, J, 10; CLUBS, K, J, 10, 2. South is the Declarer and the contract at Auction is one No Trump; at Contract, three No Trumps. To the first trick West leads the 6 of Hearts, Dummy plays the 8, East the 10, and South wins with the Jack. The Questions are:

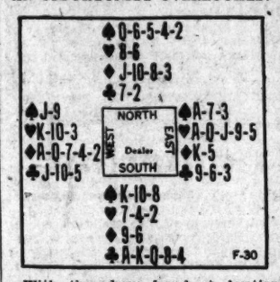
3. Which suit should South lead to trick 2 and in which hand should that trick be won?

4. Which card should be led to trick 3, and which card should be played from the other of Declarer's hands on it, supposing the intervening adversary plays small?

Mr. Work will give the correct answers to these questions during his sixth Radio Game, and tell you how to rate yourself as a Bridge player by the number of correct solutions you achieve.

WORK'S BRIDGE

AN OPPORTUNITY OVERLOOKED.



With the above hand at Auction Bridge, South would bid one Club, West one Diamond, North would pass, and East would bid one Heart. That would obtain the contract unless South should bid two Clubs, but his hand is a little short of the strength to warrant that declaration. If he did, West would bid two Hearts, which would end the auction.

In Contract South would bid one Club, West one Diamond, North would pass, and East would jump-shift to two Hearts to require West to continue the bidding. South would pass, and West would bid three Hearts. After North's pass, East would bid four.

In the play (which was at Contract) with East the Declarer and Hearts the trump, South led three rounds of Clubs; North, with worthless trumps, ruffed the third so as to be able to lead up to the weak Spades in the dummy hand. The Declarer, having lost three tricks already, had no option but to take this trick with the Ace of Spades. He then led three rounds of trumps to exhaust the adversaries and followed with the King and another Diamond. West winning the second Diamond with the Queen, led his Ace of Diamonds on which East discarded, but South discarded also and North was left with the best Diamond. East had one losing Spade in his hand and therefore the adversaries saved game.

What play did the Declarer overlook?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

The first four tricks were played a la mode, but the Declarer should have appreciated that the adverse Diamonds probably were divided 4-2; so after two rounds of trumps with one trump outstanding, he should have led the King and then a small Diamond, winning the second Diamond in dummy and following with a losing Diamond from dummy, ruffing with a high trump in closed hand. Then another trump, won with dummy's King would have enabled dummy to cash two Diamonds, giving East two discards and game.

GOOD NEWS, BRIDGERS.

We are pleased to announce we can now renew the offer of Milton C. Work's great Contract and Auction booklet entitled the "Playing Problems." Bridgers who received copies from previous offers are most enthusiastic over it.

"Playing Problems" presents eighteen hands, the complete auction and contract bidding for each hand with reasons for each bid, the answers to every question and the reasons for each answer in complete detail.

"Playing Problems," which will be of much greater value to the auction and contract player than many high-priced textbooks, is not for sale. It has been prepared exclusively for readers of The Washington Post by special arrangement with Mr. Work. One copy will be mailed to you upon request if you send self-addressed, stamped return envelope, together with six cents in stamps to defray part of the cost of printing and handling this 48-page booklet. Requests not complying with these conditions will be ignored. Address Milton C. Work, care The Washington Post.

YOUR NAME What Does It Mean?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph. D.

THE family name "Levitt" (also spelled "Levet" and "Levett") is found recorded in the earliest English documents. It has come down to us from two quite different sources. It is frequently derived from the Anglo-Saxon personal name, "Loefgeat," which means "beloved Goth." It will be recalled that the Goths were a famous Teutonic race divided into two groups, the Ostrogoths and Visigohts (East Goths and West Goths). Early in the Christian era they invaded the greater part of the Roman Empire. Various authorities have explained the name "Goth" as meaning "good," "nobly born" and "God." Another frequent source of "Levitt" is the French "Livet." There are at least eight places called "Livet" in Normandy, France. Many of these have doubtless given rise to the family name. "Livet" is believed to be a Norman term meaning "the bed of rushes." A certain William Levett is mentioned in the Hundred Rolls, a famous list of English names of the year 1273.

The family name "Norcutt" is of English origin. It is merely a variation of "Northcot," which means "the north cottage," and which indicates an original place of residence. A certain Amyas de Northcote and an Amicia de Northcotes are mentioned in the Hundred Rolls.

The family name "Benner" is of German origin. It is generally a shortened form of "Berinher." "Berinher" was an old Germanic personal name, which may be translated "bear army" or "bear warrior." In a few cases "Benner" is a shortened form of "Bennenmacher," which is also of German origin, and which means "the basket maker."

Jean's Santa Claus

By JULIE ANNE MOORE

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

JEAN MELBA, a small-town girl with big-city ideas, from Kelsey, Conn., She craves adventure and, a little girl at heart, wants Santa Claus to visit her this Christmas. Her small-town Romeo.

PHILLIP BALDWIN, bears the wish and promises to appear on Christmas with a marriage license. Spurning the line of least resistance by marrying him immediately, Jean decides to tackle New York and find a job there. Jean plans to live with

MOLLIE WILDER, a sophisticated friend, but upon arriving in the city learns that Mollie has married and left town. The situation is saved by

SANDY CLAUSE, a handsome, polished and enigmatical young man who not only protects her from a stranger's advances, but since she has lost her traveling bag, arranges for her to spend the night at the apartment of

MARCIA WHITE, whose quasi-hospitality does not blind Jean to the fact that Marcia's apartment is no haven of safety. Sandy leaves, but Jean's fears are indorsed by the sudden appearance of two sinister men,

SLIM DIGGERS and FARGESON, the latter of whom is seen to violently embrace Marcia. Jean flees the apartment and, while leaving, observes Sandy returning. The next day he gets her a job with the I. P. P. Jean learns that Farreson was murdered the night before in Marcia's apartment, and Sandy tells her he did not return, although she is sure she saw him. The I. P. P. is the Institute of Practical Philanthropy, which Sandy manages. It aims to fulfill the wish of an eccentric but benevolent millionaire to encourage motherhood ideals among little girls by giving them Christmas dolls, to be known as miniature babies. Jean learns that Mollie's marriage did not last long; her husband deserted her, so the two girls live together. In the meantime Sandy goes to Boston on business; Lionel Gilman, his assistant, makes love to Jean, and during the course of her new work she discovers little ELLEN, the daughter of Farreson, the man who was murdered.

One night when Mollie is out late, and Jean is trying to sleep, she feels something soft and warm brushing against her cheek.

It turns out to be some one seeking Molly, some one who immediately leaves. Jean received a letter from Sandy admitting that she had seen him the night of the murder returning to the apartment house but that he did not go back to Marcia's apartment. Jean finds Lionel embracing Miss Trelling, Sandy's secretary.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XV.

Eighteen working days to Christmas * * * and life grows more complicated every day. * * * I caught Lionel kissing Miss Trelling in the stock room yesterday. * * * It would have been amusing if he hadn't been so sneaky about it. * * * But he tried to make me think they were doing some work in the stock room. * * * She isn't particularly attractive, so I haven't any idea it is anything more than a kiddish flirtation. * * * But the deceitful part of it I don't like. * * * He wanted to walk home with me when I left the office, but I told him I had some shopping to do. * * * He said he had something important to ask me. * * * I don't like the sound of that, and after what I saw him doing, too, though he doesn't know I saw him with Miss Trelling in his arms. * * * A letter from Sandy yesterday. * * * The first word I've had from him since he went to Boston. * * * I had to tear it up at once because of something he wrote, but I can almost quote it from beginning to end. * * * What a darling he is! * * * He said he has missed me. * * * If he could only know how I've longed for him these last few days. * * * I searched the paper through last night and failed to find a single line about the Fargeson murder. Wonder if they've dropped it at last? * * * But I daresay the police haven't dropped it. * * * No doubt they're lying low waiting for some one to make a misstep. * * * Unless something prevents, I'm going out to see Little Ellen again this afternoon. * * * I don't know that Miss Wood will let me, but I'd like so much to bring Ellen in to see the Christmas displays. * * * They're gorgeous!

Jean's mind was quite made up never to let Lionel know that she had seen him kissing Miss Trelling. But however hard she tried to see the ridiculous side of the incident, she knew in her heart that his attempt to deceive her had left a wound that would not be easily healed.

Lionel's remark that he had something important to ask her as she was leaving the office created a sore conflict within her. Instinctively she thought she knew what it was that he would ask, and she was almost afraid to face him again. If he had asked her two days before, she might. * * * But then he hadn't. Why should she worry her head over what might have been? Today * * * if she gave him an opportunity * * * he would ask her * * * and then what?

Ask her he did, and Jean was so amazed that of her mixed emotions she could not be sure whether it was the unexpectedness of what he told her or disappointment that rendered her momentarily speechless.

The task of getting off the original list of Miniature Baby letters had been completed and the augmented clerical force had been set at the work of providing a complete list of those from whom no return cards had been received. This second list, at Jean's suggestion, was to be published in the newspapers with a request that those named write to Santa Claus in care of the I. P. P. offices if they wanted a beautiful miniature baby for Christmas.

Jean had been explaining the purpose of this combing process to Miss Trelling, who had general charge of the girls working on the Miniature Baby Plan, when Lionel came into the general office and wandered nervously about the room while waiting for Jean to complete her instructions.

Jean watched him out the corner of her eye, but went on talking until at last, for lack of anything more to say to Miss Trelling, she looked up and acknowledged his uneasy smile.

"Are you very busy," he asked, fidgeting. "I've something important to take up with you when you're free."

Jean's heart missed a beat, then pounded rapidly. He was going to ask her.

"I've finished," she said, quietly. "Do you want to talk here?"

"Lord, no!"

Jean smiled inwardly at his irritation. She preceded him to the front office.

"It's five minutes to twelve," he told here. "Let's go somewhere and eat. Or at least sit down. I can't talk in this place."

She tried to think of a reasonable excuse, but could not. After all, she told herself, she had to face it sooner or later, so why not now? And what would her answer be? "Ye gods!" she thought, helplessly. "I can't! I can't! Not after yesterday! And yet * * *"

But she left the thought unfinished, and, without a word slipped her arms into the coat Lionel held for her, tucked her hair under her little hat, and walked out of the office, Lionel following.

"Do you like Chinese food?" he asked when they were in the street.

"I like any kind of food when I'm hungry," she replied. "Which I am not."

"Then it doesn't matter," he said. "There's a Chinese restaurant over on West Forty-third street with little cosy compartments along the wall where one can talk."

They might just as well have sat at a table in the center of the floor since there were not more than a dozen persons in the restaurant, a fact of which Lionel was serenely unconscious.

When they had given their orders and the waiter had departed, Lionel said: "There's no use to beat about the bush, Jean. The sooner it's over, the better."

"Yes?" Jean said quietly. "Don't beat about, then."

His eyes wandered and he seemed hardly to see her. "Recall the old gentleman who came to the office to see me yesterday?"

"Jean nodded. "He wasn't so old, however," she added spitefully.

"All right. That isn't important. Do you know who he is?"

She shook her head, casually, as if to say she didn't care.

"That," said Lionel, "was my old man * * * You're surprised? But that isn't the half of it. He and mother have come to spend the holidays in New York and * * * he shook his head jerkily as if to rid his brain of an unpleasant thought * * * "and to meet my wife. * * *!"

"Lionel * * *!" Jean was all sympathy now. "But * * * what are you going to do?"

He shook his head hopelessly. You see, as soon as we were married I wired the folks. Mother wired at once for us to come home for a visit. But * * * before we could go, we * * * had separated * * * I couldn't tell mother that. She'd never understand. So * * * now they've come here, more than anything else to see her."

Jean stared at him dumbly, unable to think of a single constructive suggestion.

Suddenly Lionel was leaning toward her, hope in his eyes. "I've thought of everything, Jean," he told her with a quiet eagerness; "and there's just one way out. Will you help me?"

"I * * *?" puzzled. "But how can I * * *"

He said bluntly: "By pretending you're my wife, Jean * * * Don't look at me like that. I'm in trouble. * * * I've wanted to ask you to marry me anyway; but you understand there's been no legal separation."

"Then, even if I * * *"

"Wait a moment, please * * * if you'll do this, I'll file papers for divorce at once. She'll never contest it * * * And after the folks have gone, home and I'm free, we'll be married * * * you and I."

Jean felt as if he had struck her in the face.

"But I don't understand. Are you asking me to live with you * * * before we're married * * *?"

He studied her face a moment uncertainly. Then: "Not necessarily. If you'll simply pretend, go around with me, convince the old man and my mother that you're my wife. * * * Don't you see, Jean? You'll only have to act the part, and then, very soon we will be married, and * * * they'll never know. * * * Will you, Jean * * *?"

Jean said promptly: "No * * * You're asking the impossible. * * *"

The waiter brought their lunch and shuffled away. Lionel renewed his plea, sought new arguments, pleaded his love for her, appealed to her sympathies. But Jean was adamant.

Once she interrupted him to ask: "Why don't you try to find your wife?" And was amazed when he answered: "I have found her. But * * * what's the use? We didn't make a go of it the first time; why should we now? * * * Besides, she refuses to come back to me."

"But if you explained. If you told her that your parents were here, and for just a month * * *."

"I have explained." Lionel said hopelessly. "Not two hours ago. That's where I went when I left the office this morning. I begged her; but she wouldn't even listen to me."

"Oh! * * *" Then cattily: "So when she fails you, you ask me?"

"No, Jean. You know better than that. But I needed a wife, in a hurry, and she was it. * * * I'm in love with you, darling; but it seemed too much to ask of you. But when she refused, simply to act as my wife in public, why * * * I thought perhaps you'd understand, Jean. But * * * I suppose I hadn't any right to ask you. * * *"

Jean was immediately contrite. It was too much to ask. And yet, he really was in a predicament. And he did want her to marry him when it was possible. And it wouldn't do her any great harm just to pose as his wife * * * in public. And * * *.

She was suddenly filled with a desire to be alone, and when at last they came out of the restaurant, she told him that she was not going back to the office, but to her room.

Jean asked presently: "What did you tell them yesterday, Lionel? About your wife?"

"I said she'd gone to visit an aunt in Massachusetts for a few days. I had to find some excuse." And then, as he divined the reason for her question: "You * * * you don't mean you'll do it, Jean!"

"Oh, I don't know. I'll be insane if I do, but * * * stretch it out. Tell them she'll be gone a week. In the meantime * * * I may do it, Lionel * * * I'm going home and * * * think."

He caught her hand eagerly. "You're perfect, Jean! If you only will. * * *" And, as she was starting down the stairs: "By the way, I've taken my car out of hock for the benefit of the folks. Can I come by for you in the morning?"

"I suppose so," she called back indifferently, and ran on down the stairs.

The prospect of an hour alone in the quiet of her room was responsible for her rapid gait when she left the subway. She wanted to shut herself in and think.

But when she turned into her street and saw a tall, soberly dressed young man pacing to and fro before the house in which she and Mollie lived, she walked more slowly, staring intently.

Presently, when she was not more than a dozen feet away, the young man turned on his heel and walked toward her. Suddenly he stopped and grinned broadly.

For a moment she gazed at him uncertainly. Then, with a wild cry of * * * "Phil * * *" she ran to him and threw herself in his open arms.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Tribute to a Woman.

DEAR Frances McDonald: Men have told me, "Women are all alike!" They might as well have said that they all look alike; and I very well know that there is a vast difference in them in many respects.

How I happened to marry such a wonderful girl, I do not know, but now that she has gone, I am glad I did not wait till she died to appreciate her. I hoped that she might live on to the end of life with me, but now it seems I must go on alone, as the most precious treasure of my life was suddenly taken out of her home, which she loved so much!

I now come "home" to a dark and empty house, but as I used to see her there so recently, I used to pity the man who had no loving wife to greet him on his homecoming.

Years ago she wrote me regarding the wedding we were to have: "I will have a home wedding and it will be as simple and plain as I am."

She turned out to be the most lovable and beautiful girl I ever knew, and the one I loved the most of all. She loved her home and her two boys, and never neglected them for any outside interest. She had a wonderful disposition and got along so well with everybody that all liked her.

Now that Christmas is drawing somewhat near the things in our lower sideboard drawer remind me of what she used to do at Christmas time to decorate her home: The red paper bells that open up, the wreaths to be hung around and the many little candles and bright things for the Christmas tree! When her boys were small she always had a little village around the base of the tree, and I can see her now carefully placing the little houses, people and animals about to her liking, and smiling as she considered how large the animals were in proportion to the houses! I had a happy life with her, but it was all too short!

Her mother cried some at our wedding, and when I inquired why, she said: "If you are only spared to each other." She had lost her husband when that daughter was only 5 years of age. Now is my time to shed the tears! The several hundred pictures—photographs—I have taken of her I would not exchange for any paintings I have ever seen.

She was entirely unaffected and natural and posed as easily and simply as a little child. She was absolutely dependable—I never mistrusted her a moment during all our married life. She was made of the right stuff, and she gave her life and love for her home and family, and kept near and dear to us all till she dropped dead!

It was always "June" when she was around. She never once had the "blues," or got glum. It was always a cheery smile and happy face, no matter how much discouragement came along—she positively would not get discouraged. She was a brave soul, for she fought on against her fatal disease, never once giving up, till suddenly overwhelmed; I would rather have been killed than to see her suffer, so if she had to go I am thankful that her passing was sudden.

Such was the wife I have lost!

H. B.

Happy the woman who means to the man she marries what this gi.l evidently meant to the man who stands alone "looking over the things in the lower drawer of the sideboard." If women only realized what they do to the spiritual side of men they would indeed step softly. How many men today could truthfully say if the women they married, "It was always June when she was around." I know men who invent excuses to dine downtown rather than go home. True, we all know men who are tyrants when they do go home. But right now we are discussing the other side of the picture. Most men come home by instinct for encouragement and praise, just as they came home as children to be greeted and petted and praised. And some of them must wonder at the difference in the greeting and wonder, too, why they ever established a home. Fewer and fewer men are establishing homes today. And the reason is woman's attitude toward man and his poor efforts at achievement. The tribute published above should make all women stop and think.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

(Department of Agriculture.)

Use a clean hot iron as heavy as can be handled comfortably. To keep the iron clean; rub occasionally with wax or paraffin. An iron is hot enough to use when it "spats" when touched with a moistened finger. Too cool an iron may leave a rust stain. With starched clothes the iron must be hot enough to glaze the starch; otherwise it will stick and discolor the fabric.

Iron with the thread of the goods and until the garment is dry. Otherwise it will have a puckered appearance. Iron first those parts of the garment that will hang off the board while the rest is being ironed. For example, when ironing a blouse or a man's shirt, iron the cuffs and sleeves first, then the collar, and then, beginning with one side of the back or the front, depending on where the garment is fastened, continue around to the other side. After ironing a garment look it over carefully and press again where needed. Gloss on hems, tucks nad seams can be removd by moistening a piece of cheesecloth with clear water, wringing it dry, and wiping quickly over the glazed surface. Scorch is usually removed by moistening the fabric and exposure to strong sunlight, although bleaches are sometimes necessary.

Jobless Girls Picket Employers of Wives

Perth, Australia, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Unemployed single girls here have begun a vigorous campaign against employment of married women. With the slogan, "the married woman's place is in the home," unemployed girls systematically protest to employers who have married women on their staffs.

Those who refuse to discharge their married women employes and engage qualified single girls face a picket of workless girls outside their premises.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

A Good Method Spoiled.

Buddy's mother believes in reasoning with him. According to her own statement she has plenty of practice because Buddy demands the why for and why not of practically every request that is made of him.

True, he learned after the first few days the futility of constantly demanding explanations but he developed all sorts of unfortunate little tricks such as falling off his chair the moment a visitor came into the room or lying in the middle of the floor performing aimless swimming motions when a class in rhymthms was going forward.

His teachers soon discovered that reasoning with him only increased his unhappy proclivity for making himself conspicuous at any price. It was not until they resorted to isolation and other comparatively harsh tactics that they could get from him anything like desirable behavior.

A talk with Buddy's mother revealed that with the best intentions in the world she had spoiled what is normally an excellent tool of discipline.

Because her readiness to stop and explain was in part due to her own indecisiveness and in part to her feeling of guilt because she paid him only inconsistent and spasmodic attention, Buddy had learned to use it as a method for getting his own way and for attracting attention to himself.

Frequently it happens that what should be an excellent method of discipline is spoiled by lack of good sense and sureness in its use.

In such instances it is often necessary to revert temporarily to rather arbitrary and unsympathetic measures until the child develops a certain minimum of respect for authority.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

SUCCESS WITH MIGNONETTE.

MOST people regard mignonette as a garden plant and never think that it will do equally well in the house. Measured by its fragrance alone it is one of the most delightful house plants that we have. The flower heads, while not particularly colorful, exhale a most delicious odor—there is nothing just like it.

ARE YOUR FERNS DROOPING?

Perhaps even turning yellow and drooping? Then you will be sure to find Dr. Kift's leaflet on ferns of great value. It tells how to prepare the soil, how to water, how to get rid of scale, &c.

If you would like to have this leaflet, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request for it, to

JANE LESLIE KIFT,
Care of The Washington Post.

The first thing to understand in growing mignonette is the fact that it is very hard to transplant; indeed it is impossible to do so without giving the plants a check, and in order to have vigorous plants, we must avoid checking their growth at any stage of their career. The only way to avoid transplanting is to sow the seed in pots instead of in flats.

To start mignonette, prepare two-inch pots with good soil, make a slight depression in the loam in the center of each pot and drop into it three seeds, after which cover them slightly with good soil. In about two weeks, when the seed has germinated, thin to one plant to a pot, retaining the strongest. When the pot has become filled with roots, shift to four-inch pots, and as soon as you feel that these are filled with roots, shift to eight-inch pots. When making this last shift add a bit of drainage material, two inches will not be too much.

Mignonette must be watered carefully, as too much water will cause the soil to become sour and too little will cause a check of the plant's development. For the same reason never permit the plants to become potbound.

When your seedlings or young plants are about four inches high, be sure to pinch out the center of the middle shoots. Two or three shoots will soon come out from the stem, and these with the five or six which have developed will make a well-shaped plant. Pinch out any other shoots that may start. A little later, when the plants are about six inches high, they will no doubt require staking.

When the flower buds begin to show, give them some stimulation in the form of liquid manure. At first give this food once a week, then when the buds expand give it twice a week.

If you succeed in growing your mignonette without a check you will be rewarded by plants with from one dozen to fifteen good spikes to a plant.

All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is supplied.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood—Approximately 60 players, occupied solely in making foreign version pictures, are under contract either regularly or for a series of films at Hollywood's major studios.

JACK OAKIE

And in the last six months 63 feature length foreign versions have been made, of which 29 were in Spanish, 12 in French, 12 in German and 10 in other languages, including one in Chinese and one in Czechoslovakian.

With the number of films for European markets increasing every month there is reason to believe that Hollywood is becoming the world's foreign talkie center.

Nearly 50 of the foreign actors and actresses having contracts were brought here from Europe especially, while the other dozen or so came when they foresaw the possibilities of talkies in their tongue.

In addition to those who are starred and featured regularly, there are about 1,500 other more or less capable players, not to mention part-time extras, who are regularly playing characters and minor roles in Spanish, German and French.

Egg Trophy.

When John Barrymore not long ago added a trophy room to his house he gave a prominent part of it to a case which contains an egg.

It is not a reflection on his histrionic ability to report that it is one of the oldest eggs in the world. Rather it is a distinction because the only other eggs like it are in the American museum of natural history.

The egg was sent, with some ceremony and many wrappings, by Roy Chapman Andrews, who found and robbed the first dinosaur nest in the Gobi desert and who numbers Barrymore among his closest friends. So close that even a very old egg is a mark of esteem.

In Passing.

George Fawcett has been in temporary retirement for the last few months, writing his memoirs. * * * Benny Rubin plays 16 characters, with a different dialect for each, in a new comedy. * * * Jack Oakie must be "going Hollywood"—he traded his flivver in on a 12-cylinder job. * * * But he still wears the sweat shirt and the white socks. * * *

SPREAD OF STRIKE FEARED IN BRITAIN

GENERAL TIE-UP HINTED

London, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Fear ran high tonight that the strike in the Scottish coal fields will spread throughout those of Great Britain.

His statement was made after receipt of word from Glasgow that at a conference of miners' leaders, it was decided the strike should continue. Another disquieting fact was that delegates from Ayrshire, where the men have continued at work, promised to bring the miners in their area in line with the strikers.

The next important step in the situation as a whole is expected Thursday, when a conference of national union delegates meets in London. At the Glasgow meeting, it was voted to place the position of the Scottish miners before the conference.

Must Reach Decision.

"The national conference on Thursday," said Mr. Cook, "must decide whether Scotland is to remain out or make a settlement. It can not let Scotland stay out without doing something to support it. That question is for Thursday's conference to decide."

He expressed the opinion that before a national general strike could be called, a vote would have to be taken of all mine workers in the British coal fields.

The principal point of issue is the hours of work, the miners objecting to the proposition of the owners that a 90-hour fortnight go into effect. They demand a flat 7½-hour day. The owners contend the only alternative to the 90-hour, or spread-over system, is a reduction in wages.

At the Glasgow conference today, a modification of the spread-over system was reported to have been offered by the owners. Under this plan the owners would agree to pay the existing wage scale over a six weeks' period of temporary agreement.

Fears Are Predominant.

Hopes and fears as to the general situation now center on Thursday's conference, and tonight the fears predominated.

Scotland appears decisively opposed to the spread-over system and quite apart from supporting their Scottish colleagues, the miners of other districts, including the important Yorkshire area, have expressed similar opposition to this plan as a permanent basis of settlement.

Meanwhile the first disorders in connection with the strike have occurred in Scotland. Nine men appeared in court at Stirling today after a fight between miners who had remained at work in the small village of Fallin and a crowd which allegedly attacked them as they returned home from the pits last night.

Another fracas occurred in Fifeshire where stones were thrown at "safety men," who are responsible for maintenance of the deserted mines. Extra police have been drafted into that area.

Albert Capone Charged With Attack on Clerk

Miami, Fla., Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Allegations of five forms of damage were contained in the bill of particulars of a $50,000 damage suit filed by Percy Long, hotel night clerk, against Albert Capone.

The bill, on file in circuit court, said Capone is reputed to be a brother of "Scarface Al" Capone, Chicago gang leader. Allegation was made inthe bill that the defendant attacked Long in a hotel, causing physical injuries, punitive damages, damage to reputation, mental pain and anguish, and damage to his profession. The attack was unprovoked, the bill asserted.

SUSPECT IN MURDER ADMITS LOVE AFFAIR

DEFENSE FUND IS RAISED

Kansas City, Kans., Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Maj. Charles A. Shepard, elderly Army medical officer, facing trial here for the alleged murder of his second wife, issued a statement today admitting a love affair with Miss Grace Brandon, pretty 22-year-old San Antonio stenographer, but denying he poisoned his wife.

The Army officer said he became engaged to Miss Brandon five months after the death of his wife, at Fort Riley, Kans., in June, 1929. He had met the girl in 1928, while stationed at San Antonio.

"This is a detective-mad case from beginning to end," Maj. Shepard asserted. "Mrs. Shepard was an alcoholic and her mother was insane," Shepard said. He asserted his wife frequently had spoken of death as a way out of her condition of depression through alcoholism.

Divorce Was Considered.

Because of his wife's excessive drinking he said he had considered obtaining a divorce. Maj. Shepard branded statements that he alone had attended his wife in her fatal illness as untrue.

"I called in other physicians at the post in a short time and from then on they were attendant upon the case," he said.

Defense counsel have disclosed that a Catholic priest's appeals to Masons helped in raising a $2,000 defense fund for Maj. Charles A. Shepard.

Harry S. Class, of Denver, chief defense counsel, said more than 300 persons, all over the United States, including many of Maj. Shepard's friends in the vicinity of Denver, had contributed.

Priest Makes Appeal.

After a conference with Class, the Rev. J. H. O'Neill, Catholic priest and Army chaplain, stationed at the Fitzsimons General Hospital, Denver, where Maj. Shepard has worked while at liberty on bond, sent letters to Masons, saying in part:

"An appeal addressed from a Catholic priest to a Mason is rather unusual, but not without precedent. Like most Army officers, Maj. Shepard's funds are very low. His brother officers are helping him to the limit of their abilities. I am making this appeal to you, a Mason, without Maj. Shepard's knowledge or consent. He himself would not make it.

"He is overwhelmed, crushed and broken by a serious charge, coming at the close of a lifetime devoted to the care of the sick and suffering. In this crisis, where a human life is in jeopardy, I have undertaken this appeal to those who should come to his aid in his hour of need."

There were women high in law, medicine, politics, business, diplomacy, literature, arts, aviation and even in crime detection among the 36 dinner guests and the 400 who later attended the reception.

New York, Dec. 2 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Three witnesses, all with Tammany connections, were examined today before the extraordinary grand jury which indicted Martin J. Healy and Thomas T. Tommaney, who are charged with selling a magistracy to George F. Ewald for $10,000. Meanwhile, with Attorney General Hamilton Ward in New York, plans for their retrial next Monday were pushed forward.

Joseph Anderson, clerk of the county executive committee; James F. Egan, former secretary of Tammany, and Harry C. Perry, leader of the Second Assembly District, were the witnesses. Hiram C. Todd, special prosecutor, said they were asked about the appointment of Amedeo A. Bertini to the General Sessions bench and the Healy-Ewald case.

Mr. Ward and his chief assistant, Thomas Penney, jr., were present. Afterward the jurors adjourned until Thursday.

Sun Bathers Find Police Champion

St. Petersburg "Snoopers" Hit in Reply to Plea for Censorship.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Dec. 2 (A.P.).—A resolution by the West Coast Cultural League, asking Police Chief R. H. Noel to enforce the indecent exposure ordinance among the sun bathers at local beaches, drew a denial from Chief Noel today that such practices are followed by bathers here.

"The only sun bathing going on in St. Petersburg is being followed in the Municipal Solarium and similar privately owned institutions," he said. "Snoopers can view sun bathers only by riding in airplanes flying over solariums." The Cultural League's resolution, mailed to the chief last night, charged the police force with laxity in enforcing the ordinance.

Mrs. Viola Anne Rae, president of the league, said she would come to the front with concrete evidence of violations if action is not taken by the police department. The league has asked for the appointment of special investigators to prevent promiscuous sun bathing.

PARK OFFICE SPENDS LESS THAN ALLOWED

WHITE HOUSE EXPENSES

The office of Public Buildings and Public Parks was operated with Coolidge economy during the last fiscal year, according to the annual report of the director, Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, to President Hoover yesterday.

Out of a total of $9,305,863.82 appropriated by Congress last year and left over from the previous year, there was a balance of $1,438,422.67 as yet unexpended, the financial statement reveals. It cost a total of $445,860.62 for maintenance of the White House buildings and grounds and for salaries and equipment of the police.

Total expenditures for public buildings amounted to $3,297,853.50, while the cost of maintaining the national parks in the District was $1,139,388.54. Expenditures of the Arlington Memorial Bridge Commission were $2,749,025.08; World War Memorial Commission, $127,134.20; Public Buildings Commission, $30,835.11; and Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway Commission, $77,344.10. All of these items were less than appropriations.

In the maintenance of parks a diagram shows that the cost per acre has been considerably reduced during the last few years.

Arrests by the United States Park Police, headed by Capt. R. C. Montgomery, numbered 2,189 during the year, setting a new record. Of this number, 38 were dismissed. Fines of $6,873 were imposed. Twenty-eight automobiles were recovered, nine lost children were found and 165 sick persons were sent to hospitals.

The report reviews and gives the progress on the several projects under construction or completed during the year. A list of the monuments and memorials unveiled during the year is also included. Additional memorials, projected but not built, are given as the American Red Cross, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth, D and E streets northwest; Theodore Roosevelt, Monument Grounds; William Jennings Bryan, site not yet selected, and Pennsylvania Memorial Fountain, Pennsylvania avenue.

Cadets Plan War Game To Be Held Next March

Preparations for the cadet war game, to take place next March, were begun yesterday in District high schools. Preliminary eliminations are to begin January 9.

Teams of seven men with a captain will be chosen at each high school. One team will be chosen from each of the schools for participation in the final war game. The captain of winning team will receive a gold medal and the team will receive a silver cup.

Grand Jury Refuses Indictment.

The District grand jury yesterday refused to indict James E. Jackson, Negro, on a homicide charge growing out of the death of Robert Cole, also colored. The latter was shot to death November 22 on the porch of a house on Eighth street northwest, near S street, and Jackson was ordered held for grand jury action by a coroner's jury.

IN THE PLAYHOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

George Bernard Shaw, whose play, "The Apple Cart," is at the National this week, was a struggling dramatic critic in London for y'ars and y'ars. So, too, was St. John Ervine, who wrote "The First Mrs. Fraser," now on display at the Belasco. "Bin Jin," as the playboys of Broadway call him, came over to America a year or so ago and held down a dramatic desk in New York.

Next week the first play by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sifton, "In the Meantime," comes to the National. Mr. Sifton has worked on newspapers in Washington, New York, Chicago, Kansas City, Denver and Benton Harbor, Mich. He is at present Sunday feature editor of the New York World.

When the Ring Lardner-George Kaufman comedy, "June Moon," had its premiere last season on the stage of the Belasco Theater, a newcomer to the stage had her first important part—and registered well. This was Linda Watkins, who played the part of the young girl on her first trip to the big town. Now, after such a short period, Miss Watkins is on her way to town as leading lady in the Theater Guild's production, "In the Meantime," opening here next Monday night. Strange to say, though she attended the guild's school of acting, this is her first appearance in a Theater Guild production. She received glowing notices from the Baltimore reviewers, the new play having its first test over in the Maryland town Monday night.

When Helen Hayes comes to Washington next week in her new play, "Petticoat Influence," most of her schoolmates will turn out to welcome her back home. It has always been that way with Helen Hayes. She never lost contact with her friends in the old home town; one reason, of course, why she is so popular. The new play, incidentally, is much of a mystery. Produced by Gilbert Miller, who is head of the House of Frohman, no one seems to know who wrote "Petticat Influence." In all the advance literature, dished out to the press, and in the newspaper advertising, there is no recognition of authorship; which leads Mr. Nelson Bell to believe that this is one of those dream plays.

Word comes that Wells Hawks, the dean of American theatrical press agents, has written a book: "Thirty Years in the Theater." In those three decides the celebrated Wells Hawks traveled ahead of the great stars, names he helped to make household words. When the war came he gave up press agency of the theater to enlist in the United States Navy and turned out to be a "commander press agent" for that branch of the service. An invalid now, but on the road to recovery, Wells wrote the best part of his book in the U. S. Naval Hospital at Brooklyn, N. Y.

Another old-timer, Mr. Wallace Munro, writes from Pittsburgh: "I will be in Washington for one day—December 10th—ahead of John Drinkwater's play, 'Bird in Hand,' which follows Helen Hayes into the Belasco Theater for what we hope to be a record run. Please let the folks of Washington know this, as I am sure they will want to see one of the finest plays on the road."

Pat Rooney, playing this week at the Earle Theater, can never forget the many years he played on the Keith circuit. So every time he leaves his hotel for the theater he just naturally strolls up Fifteenth street, starts to go down the G street alley, to the Keith stage door, and then remembers there is no vaudeville there anymo'. "Anyway," says Patrick, "it's good to be back in Washington."

Air Legion to Recall Group's First Flight

The District of Columbia Air Legion will commemorate the first flight of its original plane, following organization of the local flying club more than two years ago, at a banquet to be held at 8 o'clock tonight at the Lee House.

Since that initial flight, 75 legion members have flown nearly 2,000 instruction hours. Guests will include Representative M. J. Mass, Democrat, Minnesota's "flying Congressman," and Lieut. Ralph Barnaby, the Navy's famous glider pilot.

North Carolina Society Plans Dance Tomorrow

The North Carolina Society of Washington will hold its first meeting of the winter season in the patio ballroom of the Hotel Carlton tomorrow night at 8:30.

Plans for a schedule of entertainments for this winter will be discussed. Dancing will be the feature from 9 until 12 o'clock, with music by Sydney's Orchestra. Capt. P. W. Foote, of the Navy Yard, is president of the society.

Capital Woman Bitten by Dog.

Miss Ruth Harrison, 26 years old, living at 15 Massachusetts avenue northwest, was bitten by a dog said by police to be owned by Robert H. Johnson, also of that address. She was removed to Emergency Hospital by friends, where she was treated.

$15,000 Damage Suit Filed Against Concern

Alleging that he was injured when another automobile truck crashed into the one under which he was working December 12, 1927, Harry L. McCormick, of Brentwood, Md., filed suit yesterday in District Supreme Court, seeking to recover $15,000 damages.

Mr. McCormick brought his action against the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co., of 513 Rhode Island avenue northeast. He asserts that he was employed by the company on the date in question and was instructed to grease an automobile truck. While doing that task, he states, another truck crashed into the vehicle he was working on, causing his right leg to be crushed. Attorney David A. Pine appears for the plaintiff.

Woman Launches Suit For $25,000 Damages

The Washington Railway & Electric Co. was named defendant in a suit for $25,000 damages filed yesterday in District Supreme Court by Mrs. Harriett Lavinia Hall, of 611 Eighteenth street northeast.

Through Attorneys James A. O'Shea, John H. Burnett and Alfred Goldstein, the woman told the court she was injured July 19, 1928, when thrown forcibly to the ground after alighting from a trolley car. Negligence in the operation of the street car is alleged. The accident is said to have occurred on Benning road northeast, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets.

DENIED FOOD, WIFE PLEADS IN SLAYING

HER CHILDREN TESTIFY

Charged with second-degree murder in connection with the death of her husband, Mrs. Myrtle L. Williams, 58 years old, went on trial yesterday before a District of Columbia Supreme Court jury and Justice Oscar R. Luhring.

The high light of the session came late in the afternoon when the woman, taking the stand in her own defense, told how she shot Claude C. Williams July 21 in a house on Tenth street northwest, near Park road. The man died on July 29.

Mrs. Williams said she did not recall shooting her husband until she heard the report of the pistol and saw him fall and found the gun clutched in her right hand. She declared she never before had fired a revolver and expressed an inborn fear for all firearms.

The woman went into details about events leading up to the killing, saying that her husband had refused to give her money for food.

Two of Mrs. Williams' children had testified they had noticed "peculiar actions" on the part of their mother.

Government testimony has centered around a quarrel between Mr. and Mrs. Williams and her expressed dissatisfaction with conditions at home. This, the Government contends, led to the slaying.

Assistant United States Attorney Irving Goldstein appears for the Government and Attorneys Welch, Daily & Welch represent the woman.

Dr. Durkee New Head Of Boston Institution

Dr. J. Stanley Durkee, former president of Howard University, this city, and now pastor of Henry Ward Beecher's old church in Brooklyn, has been named president of the Curry School of Expression, Boston, Mass., it was learned here yesterday.

The induction ceremony was followed by a reception and tea attended by many prominent educators. The Curry school was founded 51 years ago by Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Curry as the first school of expression in America.

Janitor Asks $25,000 In False-Arrest Case

Asserting that he had been arrested falsely and thus disgraced and embarrassed, Charles Lockley, of M street northwest near First street, filed suit yesterday in District Supreme Court for $25,000 in damages from Wilbur Hampton Odell and Alice Odell, of the same address.

Lockley, a janitor, says that the defendants caused his arrest on a charge that he had used a duplicate pass key to enter their apartment and had been guilty of burglary. He asserts the charge had been disproved. Attorneys George J. Boden and Milton Conn appear for the plaintiff.

Alleged Taxicab Holdup Indicted in Two Thefts

Carroll E. Burkett, 26 years old, alleged taxicab holdup, was indicted by the District grand jury yesterday on two charges of robbery of cab drivers. Burkett, according to police, instructed the drivers to take him to an out-of-the-way section, where he covered the drivers with a pistol and forced them to turn over their money.

The indictments specifically charge the man with robbing Joseph Perron and Miller W. Newman. Perron lost $5, while Newman was relieved of $20, according to the true bill.

Dr. Ferris Is Indicted As Drug Act Violator

Dr. F. William Ferris, of F street northwest near Second street, was indicted by the District grand jury yesterday on a charge of violating the Harrison narcotic act.

The indictment specifically charges the physician with sales of narcotics without using blanks furnished by the internal revenue commissioner. Charge is made that the doctor sold narcotics to Frederick A. Lathrob on five different occasions during September.

Former U. S. Official Dies.

E. E. Clark, former member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, died Monday night in Monrovia, Calif., it was learned here yesterday. Mr. Clark was named a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission by President Roosevelt. He resigned in 1921 to practice law in Washington. He is survived by his widow, three daughters and three sons.

WARDMAN DIVIDEND EVIDENCE IS HEARD

CAPITAL MAN WITNESS

Further detailed testimony relative to dividends alleged to have been paid by the Wardman Mortgage & Discount Corporation, were made yesterday in the Corporation Court in Alexandria, Judge William F. Woolls presiding, by John Berg, certified public accountant of Washington, in his second day on the witness stand.

Attempt to speed up the hearing by citing certain accounts as examples failed through the objection of former Judge Daniel Thew Wright, counsel for the defendants in the suit of minority stockholders for the appointment of a receiver, who insisted that each account be gone into separately.

Berg testified yesterday that dividends were paid in 1928, although the minute books of the corporation failed to show that meetings of the board of directors were held to declare the dividends, and also that on the dates the dividends were alleged to have been declared the corporation had no funds with which to pay them. Berg testified that in some instances dividends were not paid equally to all stockholders, this conclusion being drawn from his examination of the "dividend cash account" of the corporation.

Harry F. Kennedy, counsel for the plaintiffs, who employed Berg to audit the books, pointed out to Judge Woolls two instances in the journal book where alleged erasures and changes had been made.

Mechanic Files Bankruptcy Plea.

Aaron W. Harrison, a mechanic, of 1500 Wisconsin avenue northwest, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to adjudge him a bankrupt. He lists liabilities of $3,190.18 and assets of $3,901.49. Attorney Arthur C. Keefer appears for the alleged bankrupt.

Recreation

Three hundred acres, laid out in play and recreation spaces, and under the control of the home owners, is Strathmeade's answer to the community's recreational needs.

More and more the American family is depending on things outside the home for recreation, such as golf, tennis, riding, hiking, etc. The average residential district being made up of a succession of subdivisions, each one independently planned and constructed, rarely contains proper provisions for outdoor recreation.

Freedom to play in healthful outdoor surroundings is the natural heritage of every child. Yards around houses are too small; traffic laden streets too dangerous for play. Small parks equipped as playgrounds for children are as necessary to a residential district as streets. As a rule, it is only after acres of homes have been built and occupied that the need for playgrounds is felt.

The Strathmeade Plan includes unusually generous open spaces for community use—three nine-hole golf courses, radiating from a fine, well equipped club house, a large outdoor swimming pool, tennis courts, a well-appointed riding club, and several playgrounds for children of all ages, all within the community and all for community use.

Every purchaser of residence property has the right to know if his property is located in a district that contains within itself ample facilities for the healthful outdoor play and recreation that is the need of every person, young or old.

"You Have a Right to Know"

At your first opportunity, see the topographical model of Strathmeade, 10 ft. by 20 ft., now on display at our offices. It shows in detail the many fine things that go to make up a planned community.

Is cross eyed as her picture reveals;
Whenever she weeps
The water all seeps
Down the back of her neck to her heels.

And as you've observed
Her legs are both curved
So are farthest apart at the knee!

WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1930. 17

YALE AWARDED 3 POSTS ON ALL-EAST FOOTBALL TEAM; AVERAGES SHOW NATS' PITCHING STAFF BEST IN LEAGUE

Liska Second To Grove in Ratings

Washington's Entire Staff Among First 25 in League.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

ONE of the secrets of the Nationals' success in the last pennant race, when the Johnson crew upset the dope by finishing second, was the showing of the pitching staff, which was the best of any team in the league, not excepting the world champion Athletics.

The Nationals did not have a Lefty Grove—this big southpaw leading the league in effectiveness—but their staff was a well-rounded one, official pitching records, released this morning, showing that not only did the Washington staff top the league with respect to allowing the least hits, the least runs, the least earned runs, the least earned run average per game and the smallest number of sacrifice hits, but all of its members finished within the first 25 as regards percentage of runs granted per average nine-inning game.

Liska's Effectiveness Surprise.

One of the surprises of the season for Washington fans, no doubt, will be to learn that Adolph Liska, the submarine hurler, ranks next to Grove in effectiveness. The ace of the Mackian staff allowed an average of 3 earned runs per game, while Liska's figures were approximately 3¼. Wesley Ferrell, of the Indians, was third, and Walter Stewart, of the Browns, fourth.

Grove also captured honors on percentage of victories, winning 28 and losing 5, for a .848 average. The tall southpaw appeared in the most games, 50, with George Earnshaw taking part in only one less. Ted Lyons pitched the most innings, 298, the largest number of complete games, 29, and won 22, which represents more than one-third of the triumphs credited to the White Sox team.

"General" Al Crowder was tied with Ferrell for pitching the second largest number of complete games, 25. Earnshaw started the most games, 39, and was taken out 19 times, only 1 less than were Willis Hudlin, of the Indians, and Al Thomas, of the Chisox, who tied for this questionable honor.

Next to Liska among the Washington flingers ranks the young southpaw, Bobby Burke, whose record for effectiveness is 3.65 runs per average game, just a few points better than that of Irving Hadley.

Crowder Won Most Games Of Nat Pitchers.

Crowder won the most games of any of the Nat pitchers, 18, with Lloyd Brown close behind him, with 16. Hadley, Marberry and Jones were credited with 15 victories each.

Milton Gaston and Morris, both of Boston, each hurled a two-hit game while Ruffing, who went from Boston to New York, pitched two two-hit games. Gaston also hurled two three-hit contests, and young MacFayden, of the same team, turned in three games of three hits each. Earnshaw and Pipgrass each had three shutouts, while Lyons and Hadley pitched four extra inning games each. All told, there were 4 two-hit games, 19 three-hit, 23 four-hit, and 37 shutout games.

Other notable performances or records were: Ferrell's record against the Athletics, 5 victories and 2 defeats, and 13 consecutive victories; Whitehill's 11 straight victories for a fifth place team; Lyons' 22 triumphs for a team that was never out of seventh place; Grove's 5 defeats, 1 each by 5 different teams, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis and Washington. Walter Stewart defeated Washington 8 straight times and did not lose a game to the Johnson team. Pat Caraway pitched a 13-inning shutout against Cleveland and allowed but 3 hits on August 29. Frank Henry, of Chicago, who lost 13 consecutive games, began his losing streak on June 11 and it lasted to the end of the season, while Fred Marberry won a game for Washington on June 23 and did not lose another until his final effort of the season, meanwhile running his string of victories to 11 straight.

Dry Gridiron Maryland's Prayer

By JACK ESPEY.

A DRY day and a firm field will boost considerably Maryland's chances of beating its old State rival, Western Maryland, in Saturday's football clash in Baltimore Stadium. The Terrapin Eleven is praying for such favorable playing conditions.

Outweighed both in the line and the backfield, Maryland must be able to get the most out of its passing and end running attack in order to meet the husky Green Terrors on eve nterms. This it can not possibly do unless the state of the weather and field are to its advantage. The heavier team, as a rule, dominates its opponent on a rainy day or when the footing is bad.

Maryland does not possess an adept line smasher, although at times Rap Poppelman and Al Woods have bucked their way to sizeable gains.

All Are Threats in Open Field.

Poppelman and Woods and the rest of the Terrapin backs look best in ground attack when striking at the territory outside of the tackles. All of them are speedy, while most of them are elusive. Given good interference, each is a threat in an open field.

Maryland has three fine passers in Shorty Chalmers, Bill Evans and Poppelman, but when they have to contend with a heavy, water-soaked ball the Terrapin aerial offense loses more than 50 per cent of its effectiveness.

With superiority in weight and an outstanding line plunger in Hal Koppe, Western Maryland is not worrying about the weather. Last year the weather was unfavorable to Maryland and the Terrors won rather handily, 12 to 0.

Maryland Holds Edge In Long Rivalry.

Saturday's meeting will be either the eleventh or twelfth, the records at the two schools not being clear on this matter. However, Maryland has won a majority of the games in the past, having six victories to its credit.

Western Maryland kept its 1929 record clear by defeating Maryland and will nish another unblemished season if it triumphs Saturday. The Terrors have not lost a game since they bowed to Maryland in 1928. Since then they have won 24 and tied 2.

1911—Maryland, 6; Western Maryland, 0.
1912—Maryland, 11; Western Maryland, 7.
1913—Maryland, 46; Western Maryland, 0.
1915—Maryland, 51; Western Maryland, 0.
1919—Maryland, 20; Western Maryland, 0.
1928—Maryland, 13; Western Maryland, 6.
1929—Western Maryland, 12; Maryland, 0.

St. Alban's Foresees Good Court Season

With Bruce Kessler, former American U. basket ball star and interhigh referee at its head, St. Alban's appears to be about to enjoy one of its most successful court seasons.

Most of the 1929 regulars are back with the current Saints, who are drilling regularly pending the start of their season next month.

Outstanding among the recruits is Bob Freeman, formerly of Western High School, who was chosen all-high center last year. Around Free, Kessler will mold a team composed almost entirely of youths who appeared in St. Alban's football uniforms this fall. Among the aspirants for berths on the squad are Chesley (Capt.), Shippen, McGee, Lorton, Fletcher, Cornwell, Watson, Booth, Sterrett, Reyburn, who played for St. Alban's basket team several years ago; Craighill, formerly of Friends, and Willett, a former Western courtman.

Special, Diversified Attack Planned by Trojans for Irish

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 2 (A.P.).—The University of Southern California football squad moved through another two hours of dummy scrimmage today with Coach Howard Jones still wondering if his Trojans will be able to muster full first team strength for the Notre Dame struggle here Saturday.

Pale and wan from three weeks in the hospital, Ralph (Dutch) Wilcox, regular left end, followed the squad in street clothes awaiting a doctor's decision as to whether he will be forced to watch the season's biggest game from the bench.

As was the rule yesterday, the greatest share of the secret session was given over to defensive work, followed by a short snappy offensive drill. Trojan coaches have dropped comments indicating a special and diversified attack awaits the Rough Riders.

Aubrey Devine, scout, returned from Notre Dame's games in the East and said, without qualification:

"Notre Dame has the best team it has ever had."

He praised Metzger as a guard and said there was little to choose between Brill and Carideo in the Irish back field.

Ticket scalping prices were reported at from $35 to $75 for the best seats.

Crowds Hail Ramblers En Route to California

Aboard the Notre Dame Special, Tucumcari, N. Mex., Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Be it on the gridiron or aboard a railroad train, the football heroes of Notre Dame draw the crowds.

As the special train bearing the Notre Dame ramblers to Los Angeles and the big game with the University of Southern California steamed along its route today, thousands of fans collected excitedly at stations, peering through the windows and demanding that the players show themselves or give impromptu addresses as to how they expect to accomplish the storming of Troy.

"You'd think we were coming back victorious instead of journeying out where we have been promised a neat licking," commented Coach Knute Rockne, who spent most of the day in his compartment wondering what new plays or tricks he might concoct for the Trojans.

At least two towns along the Southern Pacific route wired Coach Rockne, asking that Notre Dame stop within their confines for workouts. Rockne, however, stuck to his original plan of drilling his players at Tucson, Ariz. The team will arrive at Tucson tomorrow noon and work out an hour later and twice on Thursday before entraining on the final lap to Los Angeles.

Weather bulletins from Los Angeles were studied carefully as Rockne worried somewhat about the temperature.

Jackie Rockne, son of the coach, is a member of the squad and contributes much merriment aboard the train. When Jackie started on the trip from Chicago yesterday, he insisted he was going to be a guard. Since that time he has been with Frank Carideo most of the time and has changed his futuristic football position from guard to quarter back.

When the family retired last night, Rockne asked Jackie where he was going to sleep.

"Up there, in the press box," he replied, pointing to the upper berth.

Cross Country Run Entry List Closes

Entries closed last night at the Twelfth Street Y for the second annual colored cross-country championship run, which will be held Saturday for a distance of 3½ miles, through the city streets, for seniors, and 2 miles for juniors. The race will start at 2 o'clock, but contestants must report tothe Y by 1 o'clock.

The Young Men's Christian Association has offered prizes to the first ten to finish in both senior and junior classes. The name of the winner of the senior division will be inscribed on the Lichtman Trophy, which will become the permanent possession of the runner or team winning it three times.

Lightweight Uniforms With Sticky Coating Prevent Fumbles.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 2.—Navy gridders stepped out for practice today as frisky as chorus girls, and in about as tight-fitting grid garb. The group of 44 players were fitted to form by Ed Thorpe, one of the great all-time stars, now a football official of note.

Whereas the Tars have for seasons been wearing uniforms weighing around 13 pounds, the new garb tips the scales at less than 9 pounds. In order to prevent fumbling in the important games with Pennsylvania this Saturday in Philadelphia and West Point in New York on December 13, the jerseys of a much darker blue cloth than the Tars usually wear, also contain a "stick-em" cloth.

The "stick-em" material, Ed Thorpe said, will prevent fumbling at critical moments. The trousers of khaki color have a knit insert of slightly darker cloth down the back. The insert will allow greater freedom and a closer fit. A new feature especially welcome to the players is the fact that bulksome hip pads are omitted without doing away with safety devices. Belgium rubber form hip protectors have been built into every pair of pants.

The line up today was intact with that of the past two weeks except that Steffanides replaced Torgeson at left end, opposite Byng. Capt. Bowstrom and Bryan were the tackle and Tuttle at center was sandwiched between Underwood and Gray, Bauer chirped the signals, while Hagberg was at full back and Kirn and Gannon at the halves.

"Old Oaken Bucket" Vanishes As Indiana Plans Celebration

The trophy, placed in competition in 1925 by George Ade, Hoosier humorist and Purdue Alumnus, and H. R. Kurrie, president of the Monon Railroad, an Indiana graduate, last was seen in the hands of a group claiming to be Indiana students in Indianapolis November 24.

It had been destined for an honor position at an Indiana University "victory dance" here in celebration of the 7 to 6 football conquest of Purdue November 22.

Indiana University authorities revealed today that the Purdue Union expressed the bucket to Indianapolis, where it was received by John Bookwalter, who planned to forward it on a motor bus to Bloomington. As Bookwalter left the express office, it was said, he was greeted by about fifteen youths who posed as Indiana students and persuaded him they were en route to Bloomington and would carry the bucket.

The trophy never reached the Indiana campus.

The Indiana Daily Student, university newspaper, tomorrow will say that alumni have appealed to Gov. Harry G. Leslie, and that a conference between the governor and officials of the two universities will be held tomorrow in an effort to discover the bucket's whereabouts.

Ring and Mat Bouts At Maryland Tonight

Boxing and wrestling matches featuring students of Billy Whip, veteran ring mentor, will be staged tomorrow night at Ritchie Gymnasium, Maryland University.

The wrestling team of the Baltimore Y. M. C. A., holders of the South Atlantic A. A. U. title, will meet a team to be picked tomorrow from local Y grapplers and students of Maryland. Almost certain to represent Maryland are "Colonel" Willis and John Jacobson. Six mat bouts will be staged.

The four boxing matches will be under the direction of Whip, who is instructing at Maryland, and will consist of matches between Maryland students.

Columbia Dribblers Prep for Opener

New York, Dec. 2.—The final week of preseason practice for Columbia's basket ball team started yesterday. The opening game will take place a week from tonight, when an alumni aggregation will meet the varsity.

Only two veterans, Gregory, center, and Bender, forward, remain, but a few reserves and newcomers have come along to give the Lions a bright outlook.

Army, Navy Boxers On Penn State List

Meets with the Army and the Navy feature the boxing schedule for the Penn State College Team for this winter. The list, consisting of six dual meets and participation in the intercollegiate championship tournament, of which the Nittany Lions will be hosts, was recently approved by the athletic board.

The season will open against West Virginia at State College on February 7. The Naval Academy will be met at Annapolis on February 28, and on the following Saturday Army will visit State College. The college title tournament will be held on March 20 and 21.

The schedule:

Pocket Billiard Field Ready for Title Play

The eight players who will compete in the world championship pocket billiard tournament at Dwyer's Broadway Academy in New York from December 8 to 18, have been officially selected by C. A. Storer, director of tournaments for the National Billiard Association of America.

East-West Grid Game Listed on Coast Dec. 27

Los Angeles, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—The Times today quoted Champ Pickens, promoter of football spectacles, as saying final arrangements had been made for the staging of an East-West gridiron clash in the Coliseum here December 27.

The newspaper said the struggle, to be sandwiched in between two other pigskin classics—the Notre Dame-Southern California battle and the Alabama-Washington State clash—would be presented under the auspices of the local Elks' lodge.

The Times said Pickens had promised the East-West struggle would provide, in addition to an array of senior stars of 1930 teams and former greats, the presence of Knute Rockne, Notre Dame mentor, and one of his pupils, Jimmie Phelan, as rival coaches.

Four Texas U. Gridders On All-Southwest Team

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Four members of the University of Texas Football Team, which won the 1930 Southwest Conference championship, won places on the honorary eleven named by the Associated Press after a poll of sports writers who observed all seven teams closely through the season. Blanton, tackle, and Stafford, Shelley and Koy, backs, were the Texas representatives. Texas Christian, 1929 champions, had two men named as the all-star team, as did Baylor. Southern Methodist University, which defeated Navy and Indiana and battled Notre Dame to a standstill only to lose in the waning minutes, placed only one man, as did Rice and Texas A. & M.

Cy Leland, the Texas Christian sprinter and football player who won a first team place a year ago, failed to gain the writers' vote for a berth. Koy, Stafford and Blanton are sophomores, as is Boswell, Texas Christian, tackle.

Catholic U. and G. W. to Revert To Thanksgiving Day Battles

GEORGE WASHINGTON and Catholic Universities will revert to their old policy of holding their annual football game on Thanksgiving Day, it was indicated yesterday by officials of both schools. This year for the first time the game was not played on Turkey Day, being staged on the Saturday preceding that date.

The alumni of Catholic University have urged the athletic administration to seek the old date for 1931. Their wishes in this respect are certain to receive full consideration, as the game has been established as the feature of their annual homecoming celebration at which time a holiday is necessary for maximum attendance.

The Thanksgiving date may prove most acceptable to George Washington if a certain arrangement of the Colonial schedule now in contemplation is worked out.

Catholic U. authorities have concluded that night agmes do not suit their purposes, and since the next game is to be held under their supervision it is quite certain to be played during the afternoon, as prior to this year, when it was played at night in Griffith Stadium.

MINORS VOTE NEW PARLEY ON DRAFT

To Reconsider Issue If Majors Withdraw Threat in 15 Days.

MONTREAL, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Bounced around like a much battered football, the trouble-making draft question was tossed back into the arms of the major leagues at today's sessions of the minor league convention.

The five nondraft leagues—International, Pacific Coast, American Association, Western and Three Eye—announced that they were prepared to reopen th whole draft question with the majors if the latter, within fifteen days, withdrew their threat to sever business relations with the minor leagues involved in the fight.

The nondraft leagues made no guarantees that they would accept the majors' demand that they submit to the universal draft, but they did offer to reopen negotiations with a view to arriving at an amicable agreement if possible.

Relations Ended December 1.

The draft dispute reached serious proportions after the failure of a recent joint major-minor conference in Cleveland. When that meeting failed to bring about a compromise acceptable to either group, the majors issued their famous ultimatum to the effect that unless the nondraft leagues agreed to accept the draft by December 1, the majors would do no further business with them.

Today's decision by the minors was adopted unanimously.

If the majors withdraw their ultimatum the nondraft leagues will appoint a committee of twelve members, three each from the AA leagues, two from the Western and one from the Three-Eye League, to meet with a committee from the majors to consider and "arrive at a settlement if possible" of the draft problem. If the majors decline, the intimation was plain that the minors were ready to get along by themselves, recruiting their players from the same sources as the majors.

The general opinion here was that the next move would come at the joint major league meeting, at New York next week. Some minor league officials said they firmly believed the majors would refuse to withdraw their ultimatum and that a split between the two groups was inevitable. Others took the position that however far apart the disputants seemed each needed the other and that eventually an acceptable compromise would be adopted.

At the annual meeting of the Washington Chapter, Baseball Writers Association of America, held yesterday at The Washington Post, John B. Keller, of the Star, was unanimously elected chairman for the coming year.

Ban Johnson, Ill, Slightly Improved

St. Louis, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Ban Johnson, former American League president, who has been seriously ill in St. Luke's Hospital here for eight weeks, was reported slightly improved today by Dr. Louis H. Behrens, one of the four attending physicians.

Johnson has been suffering from diabetes and hardening of the arteries, which has impaired circulation in the right leg. A slight operation was performed on his right foot a month ago. It has not been determined whether another operation will be necessary.

Squad Picked From Eight Colleges

Macaluso's Selection Almost Unanimous; Hewitt Named.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Eight colleges are represented on the All-Eastern football eleven for 1930 selected by a consensus of sports writers and named today by the Associated Press. Yale has three men on the team, the Army two and Dartmouth, Harvard, Fordham, Cornell, Columbia and Colgate one apiece.

Heading the first team line-up are two players who were virtually unanimous choices—Ben Ticknor, Harvard's great center, and Leonard Macaluso, giant Colgate full back, who leads the country's major colleger players in scoring.

Price Leads All Linemen Except Ticknor.

Albie Booth returned to the first team quarter back berth which he held last year although the Yale captain-elect was not the one-sided choice that he was in 1929.

Ralph Hewitt, Columbia's leader for next year, gets a half back post. His regular position is quarter back so that he and Booth could be alternated at the signal-calling assignment, if the coach of the mythical team desired. Both men can run a team, dropkick, punt and pass as well as carry the ball. Viviano and Macaluso are unexcelled for heavy-duty plunging, blocking and defensive work.

Price's running mate at tackle is Frank Foley, one of the bulwarks of the powerful Fordham line. Fred Linehan, of Yale, and Gay Bromberg, of Dartmouth, with exactly the same number of votes, win the guard positions. Carl Carlmark, of the Army, and Herster Barres, of Yale, are the ends, with nothing to choose between them in the balloting.

Ticknor and Booth are the only repeaters from last year. Fay Vincent, of Yale, a first team tackle in 1929, makes the second eleven.

Fordham has three men on the second team, Harvard two and Yale, Army, Dartmouth, New York University, Holy Cross and Colgate one each.

This team boasts a back field which rivals the first-string quartet in all-around ability and probably excels it in passing. Wood, Harvard; Hart, Colgate, and O'Connell, Holy Cross, all are crack shots, and big Jim Murphy, of Fordham, who makes the team at full back, although his regular position is at half, is a brilliant receiver. Murphy narrowly missed a first team margin.

Ticknor and Tom Siano, Fordham's flashy leader, who gets the second team pivot job, all but monopolized the votes for center.

3 Teams Tied for Lead In Six-Day Bike Race

New York, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Three teams pedaled around the oval in Madison Square Garden today tied for the lead in the semifinal six-day bike race. At the close of the afternoon sprints at 4 p. m. the leaders were the combination of Bellont-Richili, Spencer-Debaets and Dusiberg-Buschenhager.

The latter pair sprinted into a triple tie for the lead by replacing Denef and Charlier, a team that shared the lead earlier in the day. Denef and Charlier dropped back to a second-place tie with Peden-Crossley, one lap behind the pace setters.

CRONIN'S WORTH TO NATS REVEALED IN RECORDS

RookieShines At Driving In Runs

Ruth Drew 136 Walks Last Season; Bishop Passed 128 Times.

JOE CRONIN was the outstanding National in that most important item, "runs batted in," according to the official American League averages released yesterday, showing the number of bases on balls, times hit by pitchers, runs batted in and times struck out, the "San Francisco Keed" rating eighth in the league in this respect with a 126 total

Lou Gehrig's 174 took top honors, with Al Simmons second, Jimmy Foxx third, and Babe Ruth fourth. Gehrig's figures were within one of his world's record. Fifteen drove home 100 or more runs last season as against ten in 1929.

Ruth Drew Most Passes.

Babe Ruth drew the greatest number of passes from pitchers, 136, with Max Bishop second, the Mack second-sacker drawing 128, exactly the same number credited to him in the previous season. Jimmy Foxx and Ed Morgan, of the Indians, were fanned the most times, 66.

Jimmy Dkyes, Philadelphia veteran, was the best target for the pitchers, being hit no less than ten times during the season. Ossio Bluege, of the Nats, was second in this respect, being knicked eight times. Heinie Manush was the only Washington regular not hit at least once by opposing wild men.

As a team, the Nationals were fooled by enemy pitching the least number of times, 438, while the Yankees struck out the most, 569.

Philadelphia and Washington played two games May 30, in which the A's received 21 bases on balls, 10 in the first and 11 in the second game. The record for a game for the season was made by St. Louis on August 25, when 12 Browns were presented tickets to first by Bridges, a recruit pitcher for Detroit who won his game, 7-5.

In 150 games out of 154, the Yankees received at least one base on balls. New York also tied the White Sox for the most strikeouts in a single game. Whitehill whiffed 11 of the Yankees August 14, while on June 23, Grove fanned the same number of White Sox.

MARINES TO SEEK 5TH SERVICE TITLE SATURDAY

Coast Guard In 2nd Bid For Cup

Hamilton Led Navy Team to Victory Over Devil Dogs.

THE All-Marines will be seeking their fifth victory in the President's Cup football series when they tackle the Coast Guard Bears in Griffith Stadium Saturday in a game for benefit of Washington's unemployed. The fourth Marine triumph was scored last year when Tom Keady's Leathernecks defeated the Coast Guard, then in its first series game, by a score of 19 to 0.

Marine ascendency in the enlisted men's service struggles began with the second game of the series in 1925. The Army was the first victor in the series, defeating the Navy Scouting Fleet Team in 1924. Army relinquished the cup the second year when the Marines captured a 20-to-0 decision and for the next two years the Leathernecks reigned supreme. They downed Army in 1926 by 22 to 7 and applied the whitewash, 14 to 0, the following year.

Navy Challenges Marines For 1928 Game.

Then the Army withdrew from competition and left the Marines, like Alexander, looking for new worlds to conquer. For a time it appeared as though the sea soldiers would retain the cup as a memento of an inter-service struggle that had ceased to exist.

In former years the Navy had found it increasingly difficult to organize a team and had left the Marines and the Army to fight it out alone for the prized trophy. But, finally, Secretary Wilbur came to the rescue and arranged for an All-Navy eleven to face the Marines in 1928.

A team from Newport, including Tom Hamilton, former Naval Academy star, came down to Griffith Stadium and put the Marines to flight, leaving the cup behind them. The score was 10 to 0, a victory clean cut in its decisiveness. It was the only game the Marines lost that year and the one they wanted to win above all others.

But the Navy gathered up its laurels and departed. The team was broken up by official order, and the series seemed disrupted. Then along came the Coast Guard.

The Bears promise that they will put up a more strenuous argument this year than they did last. Their optimism is based on greater experience, better coaching, and improved material.

IN THE COLLEGE CORNER

By JACK ESPEY

REPORTS to the contrary notwithstanding, Washington is only a possibility at this time for the site of the 1931 football game between Maryland and the Naval Academy, according to Commander C. V. Reinecke, Navy's graduate manager of athletics.

Nothing is to be done about a decision as to where the game is to be played—Washington or Baltimore—for about a month yet. Some time during the winter Reinecke will get together with Curly Byrd, Maryland coach and director of athletics, and name the site of the game.

If Washington is selected, Reinecke inferred, it will be because the Naval Academy will want to determine just how much support it may expect from this city for future contests.

The date of the Maryland-Navy game is October 10. The fact that no other local game is scheduled on that date should aid Washington's chances of securing the attraction. There is no doubt that Washington wants it.

Mills Calls Detroit Best Opponent.

Detroit University, says Tommy Mills, Georgetown head coach, was the best football team Georgetown encountered during the 1930 season. On the face of it, this statement seems unjustified by Georgetown's experiences with other teams, such as Michigan State, which outplayed Detroit; New York University, which easily downed Villanova and Carnegie Tech, and Western Maryland. Georgetown lost to N. Y. U. and Western Maryland.

But Mills goes on to explain that Detroit did not flash its best form in several of its games, notably in those with Michigan State and Iowa, and that it did blaze forth in full strength against Georgetown.

Not alibi-ing for his team, Tommy admits that Detroit was stronger than Georgetown. He claims the Titans possess just about every football essential, particularly those most valuable to the Notre Dame system, which Detroit and Georgetown employ. By this, Mills means husky ends and tackles and sturdy backs capable of fine blocking.

Asked if he thought Detroit was as strong as any Western Conference team, Mills replied in the affirmative. "That's saying a lot, I know, but I sincerely think so," he said.

"Suicide" Play Aids Stanford.

The "suicide" play, a tricky double reverse, gained Stanford 25 yards and placed it in position to score the decisive touchdown.

The reason for the strange designation is that the ball-carrier goes around end alone. During the unfolding of the play the whole Stanford team moves to one side of the line, deceiving the opposition into concentrating its defense at that particular point. Before the ball-carrier reaches the other flank the defensive end on that side has been blocked in by a guard.

The deception is not wholly accomplished by the movement of the Stanford interferers, however, as the faking of the wing backs, criss-crossing behind the line, helps to confuse the opponents.

Stanford worked this play three times against Dartmouth after having introduced it some time before against California. Its execution must have been perfect or the opposing ends must have been a little below par above the ears.

MOST of us think ice and steam are wet, but, as stated yesterday, they are both dry. Ice is only wet when it melts and then it is not ice, so there you are. Steam is not only dry but it is also invisible.

The porcupine, or globe fish, also shown yesterday, resembles nothing more than a ball of sharp spikes, and that is just what it would have its enemies think. When he has time to fill himself with air and water the little fish is quite formidable.

The 1,500 ton rock which was thrown 150 yards by the New Zealand earthquake in 1929, landed on top of a house. The three occupants of the house were buried beneath the huge stone.

The name George Gipp goes down in football history as one of the greatest players of all time. Gipp's three runs (80, 68 and 70 yards) for touchdowns from which he was called back each time for penalties were partly Knute Rockne's ideas.

Rockne, desiring to test his team while playing a weak opponent, had the officials impose penalties without hesitation and often without reason. Gipp, true to his reputation, took the penalties as a real sportsman.

Two Bears Victim of Pair Of Bow and Arrow Hunters

Special to The Washington ost.

WARRENTON, Va., Dec. 2.—That archery and the use of the long bow, made famous by the old English archers of medieval days, is returning and is becoming not only a popular sport but at the same time a practical one is proven by a recent hunt in the Dismal Swamp of Virginia.

Hugh Moffett, of Warrenton, and V. A. Sissler, of Washington, both members of the Potomac Archers, of Washington, and of the National Archery Association, brought their skill with the bow and arrow into play last week when they killed two large black bears on the eastern side of the Dismal Swamp.

650-Pounds of Bear Meat In Two Kills.

For the last four years these two young men have been practicing with the long bow and have competed in archery contests in Washington, Baltimore, Rye, N. Y., and Boston, held under the rules of the national association, and their skill is attested by the prizes they have won in these contests. In addition they have hunted and killed in the last few years a large number of rabbits, squirrels, birds, and other small game. Each year they have spent a week or more in the Big Swamp, but it was only last week that they had success in bringing down a bear.

In their recent hunt, they killed with their arrows two large black bears. One weighed 350 pounds and measured from tip to tip 6 feet 4 inches, and the smaller bear weighed 300 pounds and was 5 feet 6 inches in length. Both were males of about 4 to 6 years of age.

From the story of Hugh Moffett it seems that they found bear tracks their first night in camp last week and lay in wait five hours for their quarry when, just as the moon was waning, a large bear crossed the path some 30 yards away.

Both Sissler and Moffett drew their bows and let loose their arrows. The bear, roaring with pain, dashed off the path and into the undergrowth. Before they had an opportunity to follow this bear, which they were positive had been wounded, another crossed the path on the other side of them. Moffett drew his bow on him and this bear likewise rushed off into the woods and swamp.

At daybreak, the hunters secured the services of a guide and found the first bear dead, a short distance from where he had been seen crossing the path.

One arrow, identified as Sissler's, had gone into the bear's spine and the other arrow, Moffett's, had severed the jugular vein. Either arrow would have produced the fatal wound. The other bear they later discovered alive, but badly wounded and dragging his hind legs, having been shot through the spine and paralyzed. He was soon dispatched with another arrow. The arrow in the spine of the second bear, which brought him to earth, was from Moffett's bow. As far as is known this is the first time that bears have been successfully hunted and killed with a bow and arrow.

NEALE URGED AS WEST VA. COACH

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 2. West Virginia University Athletic Board of Control has announced that A. Earle (Greasy) Neale will be recommended to President J. R. Turner and the board of governors to succeed Ira E. Rodgers, resigned, as head coach of football and other university sports. Neale is expected to come on and have charge of the spring practice and to direct the football team in its efforts in the fall of 1931.

Neale, a product of Parkersburg, W. Va., High School and West Virginia Wesleyan College, began his coaching career on graduation from Wesleyan College in 1914, first working at Muskingum, Ohio, College, then back to his alma mater at Wesleyan, thence to Washington and Jefferson, and finally for six years at the University of Virginia at Charlottesville.

Neale Has Good College Coaching Record.

At all of these institutions, except possibly at Virginia, Neale set a new mark for gridiron success, his greatest achievement being seventeen successive victories over major opponents at W. and J., culminating in 1921 in the Red and Black going to the coast to play California a 0-0 tie in the Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena.

Along with his football coaching, Neale played major league baseball with the Cincinnati Reds for eight years; from 1916 to 1923, inclusive, being coach of the Reds in the latter year. He gave up professional baseball upon going to Virginia, but went back in 1929 to coach the St. Louis Cardinals, resigning then his post at Virginia and giving up football coaching for the past two seasons.

Neale's playing as well as coaching days have been marked by one sensational finish after another, and it is expected that his coming back to his native mountain State to coach the teams of its leading educational institution will mark a new and colorful era in the annals of her sport teams.

Alexandria Court Season To Get Under Way Tonight

ALEXANDRIA, Dec. 2.—Alexandria's basket ball season will officially open Wednesday night in Armory Hall when the newly organized R. F. & P. All-Stars mix with the Naval Air Station Courtmen in their initial tussle at 8:30 o'clock.

Robert McDonald, manager of the railroaders, has signed the following players: Buddy Zimmerman, Eliot Cabell, Les McMenamin, Earl Cronin, and Bussey Brenner, all members of the Celtics in 1929, and Anderson, Grubbish, and Colliflower, three players from Washington.

33 Courtmen Report at Alexandria High.

The Railroaders will meet the Richmond Blues, Frederick Fado Five, Richmond Councillors and other fast teams in games this season. Manager McDonald is also arranging for several week-end trips.

The Central Athletic Club, a newly organized senior team in the Alexandria basket ball world, is after games. Manager Broaddus Carver can be reached by phoning Alexandria 2284, between 8 a. m., and 6 p. m. The Centrals will play all preliminary tussles to the Del Ray A. C.

Thirty-three candidates have reported to Coaches Given and Wilson, of the Alexandria High School Basket Ball team, for positions on the varsity squad. The "Twins" are now holding daily practices in armory hall.

It was announced that the Virginia Scholastics would open their court season on December 18 in Washington, opposing the crack Western High School Team. Three managers, James Moriarty, Malcolm Carr and Gaines Pritter, are handling all business arrangements for the season.

"Slim" Evans is the latest newcomer to the squad. He formerly played basket ball at Warsaw High School in Wisconsin. He is a 6-footer and is practically assured of the center berth. Evans attends George Mason High School.

Those bidding for berths follow: Gist, Embrey, Edwards, Backus, Janney, Hitt, Howard, Petersillia, Travers, Luckett., Haywood, Jackson, Bruin, Good, Boran, Hudson, Routzahan, Schriener, Evans, Simms, Ticer, Ranaudus, Knight, Hoeft, Gallagher, Mendelson, Trenary, Dixon, Moore, Parker, Fenn and Suthard.

Capt. Tommy Lucas, of the St. Mary's Lyceum quint, tonight announced his team would entertain Western High School, of Washington, Friday night in their opening game in this city. The contest will be played in Armory Hall.

Raymond Heberlig, former Old Dominion Boat Club star, has been signed to coach the Del Ray Athletic Club tossers this season. Carroll Rush, former manager of the Knights, will serve as game manager. The Red Birds will hold their first practice in Armory Hall on Thursday night.

BIG SIX FOE SOUGHT BY PIXLEE

G.W. Coach to Attend Parley; Seeks Kansas or Missouri.

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY, through its athletic director, Jim Pixlee, is making efforts to schedule a prominent Western team in addition to Iowa, already lined up, for its 1931 football schedule. Pixlee departed last night for Kansas City where he will confer with coaches of Big Six Conference teams in annual meeting starting tomorrow and lasting until Saturday.

A graduate of Missouri University, member of the Big Six, and a former assistant coach at that institution, Pixlee has many friends and acquaintances among the athletic officials in the conference territory. He left here with high hopes of establishing relations with at least one of them.

Missouri or Kansas Seen As Best Bets.

It is believed likely that Pixlee will center his efforts on negotiating with Missouri and Kansas, although he will not pass up any chance of scheduling one of the other conference members, Nebraska, Kansas Aggies, Oklahoma and Iowa State.

The developments of the conference meeting may include complete expulsion of Kansas, in which event it is thought that the Kansas authorities, with the problem of filling a wide-open schedule on their hands, will welcome offers from prospective new opponents. Kansas is under fire for having used "Jarring Jim" Bausch, a player who was receiving a salary the year round from a business concern which he served actively during the summer months.

Pixlee is intent on arranging for 1931 the best football schedule in George Washington's history. He already has secured Iowa and Boston University as new foes and hopes to schedule one of the stronger Eastern teams to replace Navy.

G. W. Plans Trip to Iowa And Boston.

The Colonial eleven will visit Iowa City next year and will entertain the Hawkeyes here in 1931. The game with Boston University, never before scheduled by a G. W. team, will be played in Boston.

With an almost entire sophomore personnel, George Washington attained a .500 winning percentage for the 1930 season. It anticipates a stronger team next fall. Members of this year's freshmen squad are expected to strengthen the varsity.

TARS LISTING.

The Jacksonville (Fla.) Team is lining up a number of games for its spring schedule. The Tars have nine contests already arranged, including the Philadelphia Athletics on March 29, the St. Louis Cardinals on April 5, the New York Yankees on March 28, the Phillies on March 27, Toledo on March 30 and 31, and Columbus, of the American Association, on April 3 and 4.

Tech Court Coach Names 11 Men for Special Training

COACH ARTIE BOYD, basket ball mentor of Tech, high school champions of Washington, gave notice yesterday that he is beginning to see an embryonic team in the maze of the 108 men who reported for basket ball practice, by naming the following 11 cagers as those who will receive special and extensive training in the immediate future. They are Capt. Russell, Beach, Wills, Willison, Johnson, Wheeler, Reed, Lewis, Johns, Bone and Reichardt.

It is probable that followers of Tech's basket team will view a different mode of offensive play this year. Coach Boyd put a team composed of Beach, Willison, Wheeler, Lewis and Bone through Pittsburgh's style of offense yesterday, and it seems likely that this system will remain at Tech.

Tech will continue the five-zone defense system originated by "Pop" Allen, Kansas' dean of football coaches and learned by Boyd while performing under the eye of Coach Burton Shipley at Maryland. Each man is assigned a given area of floor space and trained to regulate matters in his precinct consistent with the well-doing of his team.

Tech is going to have a small, fast team this year and will depend entirely on teamwork rather than on the potshot ability of any one performer. Team play and speed will be stressed.

JOE FITZGERALD, regarded as the most capable basket ball referee ever developed in Washington, died yesterday morning at the Naval Hospital after four years of semi-invalidism brought on by a paralytic stroke which seized him in the midst of the 1927 basket ball season. He was 34 years old.

While the first stroke in 1927 placed him critically near death, his recovery after a convalescence of a year was marked. His improvement continued throughout 1929 so that it was possible for him to dispense with his cane. He again reported regularly at his position in the Government Printing Office and was able to drive his automobile.

He was stricken by a third and fatal paralytic stroke late in the summer and was removed to Naval Hospital.

His first refereeing was for Gonzaga High in 1920. His merit as a court official was soon recognized. He became the arbitrator in the tilts between the two great rivals of the time, the Aloysius Club and the Yankees. In a short time he was the most sought after official in the city and suburbs. His long list of engagements were directly responsible for his first paralytic stroke.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary Margaret Fitzgerald, of 3811 Tenth street northwest, his sister, Miss Mary C. Fitzgerald, and his two brothers, Aloysius and Leo.

To settle a dispute between the teams arising out of last Sunday's 6-6 tie the Alcovas and the Seat Pleasants will meet Sunday at 2 o'clock at Boyd Stadium in what promises to be a real grid battle.

The Seat Pleasants will be "padded" with certain stars from the Mercuries and other clubs.

SOUTH LISTS OUTSIDE FOES

Intersectional Grid Games to Feature 1931 Season.

By DILLON GRAHAM.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 2 (A.P.).—The end of the gridiron season finds schedule makers jockeying for position on the 1931 slates of the major Dixie teams. Indications are that intersectional skirmishes will take an even higher spot than before and there will be more intraconference engagements.

Information from Baton Rouge is that Louisiana State will play two outside foes—the Army and Texas Christian University. Russ Cohen has just signed a new three-year contract and will direct the Tigers through the schedule which also includes five conference games.

Kentucky gets ambitious with an eight-game conference slate. The Wildcats play Clemson, Washington and Lee, Maryland, V. P. I., Alabama, Duke, V. M. I. and Tennessee.

Georgia goes North twice to play Yale and New York University. Alabama is missing from the Georgia schedule.

Information from Nashville says Vanderbilt is to play Tulane and Alabama, conference cochampions, and probably five other conference teams, including Maryland and North Carolina. Ohio State will replace Minnesota as the Commodores' intersectional opponent.

Alabama has another eight-game conference hook-up to work on. The Crimsons play Mississippi, Tennessee, Sewanee, Mississippi A. & M., Kentucky, Florida, Clemson and Vanderbilt.

Florida is reported to have Syracuse for its intersectional opponent instead of Chicago. Reports from Chapel Hill are that North Carolina is negotiating for a game with Florida.

Maryland Off Yale's Grid Schedule.

After several years of play Duke is off Navy's schedule and Maryland does not play Yale. Georgia Tech is to play Carnegie Tech and Pennsylvania again.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 2.—Raymond Updegrove, local hunter, has maintained a record, established since the first season he went hunting, getting his deer or bear on the first day out. For four years now, Updegrove has brought down a deer or a bear on the first day. Yesterday he brought down a six-prong buck on the first shot while hunting in Adams County, Pa. Last year he brought in a big buck and the two previous years he got bears on the first day of the hunting season.

CRONIN'S WORTH TO NATS REVEALED IN RECORDS

RookieShines At Driving In Runs

Ruth Drew 136 Walks Last Season; Bishop Passed 128 Times.

JOE CRONIN was the outstanding National in that most important item, "runs batted in," according to the official American League averages released yesterday, showing the number of bases on balls, times hit by pitchers, runs batted in and times struck out, the "San Francisco Keed" rating eighth in the league in this respect with a 126 total

Lou Gehrig's 174 took top honors, with Al Simmons second, Jimmy Foxx third, and Babe Ruth fourth. Gehrig's figures were within one of his world's record. Fifteen drove home 100 or more runs last season as against ten in 1929.

Ruth Drew Most Passes.

Babe Ruth drew the greatest number of passes from pitchers, 136, with Max Bishop second, the Mack second-sacker drawing 128, exactly the same number credited to him in the previous season. Jimmy Foxx and Ed Morgan, of the Indians, were fanned the most times, 66.

Jimmy Dykes, Philadelphia veteran, was the best target for the pitchers, being hit no less than ten times during the season Ossio Bluege, of the Nats, was second in this respect, being knicked eight times. Heinie Manush was the only Washington regular not hit at least once by opposing wild men.

As a team, the Nationals were fooled by enemy pitching the least number of times, 438, while the Yankees struck out the most, 569.

Philadelphia and Washington played two games May 30, in which the A's received 21 bases on balls, 10 in the first and 11 in the second game. The record for a game for the season was made by St. Louis on August 25, when 12 Browns were presented tickets to first by Bridges, a recruit pitcher for Detroit who won his game, 7-5.

In 150 games out of 154, the Yankees received at least one base on balls. New York also tied the White Sox for the most strikeouts in a single game. Whitehill whiffed 11 of the Yankees August 14, while on June 23, Grove fanned the same number of White Sox.

MARINES TO SEEK 5TH SERVICE TITLE SATURDAY

Coast Guard In 2nd Bid For Cup

Hamilton Led Navy Team to Victory Over Devil Dogs.

THE All-Marines will be seeking their fifth victory in the President's Cup football series when they tackle the Coast Guard Bears in Griffith Stadium Saturday in a game for benefit of Washington's unemployed. The fourth Marine triumph was scored last year when Tom Keady's Leathernecks defeated the Coast Guard, then in its first series game, by a score of 19 to 0.

Marine ascendency in the enlisted men's service struggles began with the second game of the series in 1925. The Army was the first victor in the series, defeating the Navy Scouting Fleet Team in 1924. Army relinquished the cup the second year when the Marines captured a 20-to-0 decision and for the next two years the Leathernecks reigned supreme. They downed Army in 1926 by 22 to 7 and applied the whitewash, 14 to 0, the following year.

Navy Challenges Marines For 1928 Game.

Then the Army withdrew from competition and left the Marines, like Alexander, looking for new worlds to conquer. For a time it appeared as though the sea soldiers would retain the cup as a memento of an inter-service struggle that had ceased to exist.

In former years the Navy had found it increasingly difficult to organize a team and had left the Marines and the Army to fight it out alone for the prized trophy. But, finally, Secretary Wilbur came to the rescue and arranged for an All-Navy eleven to face the Marines in 1928.

A team from Newport, including Tom Hamilton, former Naval Academy star, came down to Griffith Stadium and put the Marines to flight, leaving the cup behind them. The score was 10 to 0, a victory clean cut in its decisiveness. It was the only game the Marines lost that year and the one they wanted to win above all others.

But the Navy gathered up its laurels and departed. The team was broken up by official order, and the series seemed disrupted. Then along came the Coast Guard.

The Bears promise that they will put up a more strenuous argument this year than they did last. Their optimism is based on greater experience, better coaching, and improved material.

MOST of us think ice and steam are wet, but, as stated yesterday, they are both dry. Ice is only wet when it melts and then it is not ice, so there you are. Steam is not only dry but it is also invisible.

The porcupine, or globe fish, also shown yesterday, resembles nothing more than a ball of sharp spikes, and that is just what it would have its enemies think. When he has time to fill himself with air and water the little fish is quite formidable.

The puffer, a similar fish, though without the spikes, often puffs itself until it bursts.

The 1,500 ton rock which was thrown 150 yards by the New Zealand earthquake in 1929, landed on top of a house. The three occupants of the house were buried beneath the huge stone.

The name George Gipp goes down in football history as one of the greatest players of all time. Gipp's three runs (60, 68 and 70 yards) for touchdowns from which he was called back each time for penalties were partly Knute Rockne's ideas.

Rockne, desiring to test his team while playing a weak opponent, had the officials impose penalties without hesitation and often without reason. Gipp, true to his reputation, took the penalties as a real sportsman.

IN THE COLLEGE CORNER

REPORTS to the contrary notwithstanding, Washington is only a possibility at this time for the site of the 1931 football game between Maryland and the Naval Academy, according to Commander C. J. Reinecke, Navy's graduate manager of athletics.

Nothing is to be done about a decision as to where the game is to be played in Washington or Baltimore—for about a month yet. Some time during the winter Reinecke will get together with Curly Byrd, Maryland coach and director of athletics, and name the site of the game.

If Washington is selected, Reinecke inferred, it will be because the Naval Academy will want to determine just how much support it may expect from this city for future contests.

The date of the Maryland-Navy game is October 10. The fact that no other local game is scheduled on that date should aid Washington's chances of securing the attraction. There is no doubt that Washington wants it.

Mills Calls Detroit Best Opponent.

Detroit University, says Tommy Mills, Georgetown head coach, was the best football team Georgetown encountered during the 1930 season. On the face of it, this statement seems unjustified by Georgetown's experiences with other teams, such as Michigan State, which outplayed Detroit; New York University, which easily downed Villanova and Carnegie Tech, and Western Maryland. Georgetown lost to N. Y. U. and Western Maryland.

But Mills goes on to explain that Detroit did not flash its best form in several of its games, notably in those with Michigan State and Iowa, and that it did blaze forth in full strength against Georgetown.

Not alibi-ing for his team, Tommy admits that Detroit was stronger than Georgetown. He claims the Titans possess just about every football essential, particularly those most valuable to the Notre Dame system, which Detroit and Georgetown employ. By this, Mills means husky ends and tackles and sturdy backs capable of fine blocking.

Asked if he thought Detroit was as strong as any Western Conference team, Mills replied in the affirmative. "That's saying a lot, I know but I sincerely think so," he said.

"Suicide" Play Aids Stanford.

Fans and sports writers on the Coast are discussing Stanford's "suicide" play that helped the Cardinals beat Dartmouth, 14 to 7.

The "suicide" play, a tricky double reverse, gained Stanford 25 yards and placed it in position to score the decisive touchdown.

The reason for the strange designation is that the ball-carrier goes around end alone. During the unfolding of the play the whole Stanford team moves to one side of the line, deceiving the opposition into concentrating its defense at that particular point. Before the ball-carrier reaches the other flank the defensive end on that side has been blocked in by a guard.

The deception is not wholly accomplished by the movement of the Stanford interferers, however, as the faking of the wing backs, criss-crossing behind the line, helps to confuse the opponents.

Stanford worked this play three times against Dartmouth after having introduced it some time before against California. Its execution must have been perfect or the opposing ends must have been a little below par above the ears.

Two Bears Victim of Pair Of Bow and Arrow Hunters

Special to The Washington Post.

WARRENTON, Va., Dec. 2.—That archery and the use of the long bow, made famous by the old English archers of medieval days, is returning and is becoming not only a popular sport but at the same time a practical one is proven by a recent hunt in the Dismal Swamp of Virginia.

Hugh Moffett, of Warrenton, and V. A. Sissler, of Washington, both members of the Potomac Archers, of Washington, and of the National Archery Association, brought their skill with the bow and arrow into play last week when they killed two large black bears on the eastern side of the Dismal Swamp.

650-Pounds of Bear Meat In Two Kills.

For the last four years these two young men have been practicing with the long bow and have competed in archery contests in Washington, Baltimore, Rye, N. Y., and Boston, held under the rules of the national association, and their skill is attested by the prizes they have won in these contests. In addition they have hunted and killed in the last few years a large number of rabbits, squirrels, birds, and other small game. Each year they have spent a week or more in the Big Swamp, but it was only last week that they had success in bringing down a bear.

In their recent hunt, they killed with their arrows two large black bears. One weighed 350 pounds and measured from tip to tip 6 feet 4 inches, and the smaller bear weighed 300 pounds and was 5 feet 8 inches in length. Both were males of about 4 to 6 years of age.

From the story of Hugh Moffett it seems that they found bear tracks their first night in camp last week and lay in wait five hours for their quarry when, just as the moon was waning, a large bear crossed the path some 30 yards away.

Both Sissler and Moffett drew their bows and let loose their arrows. The bear, roaring with pain, dashed off the path and into the undergrowth. Before they had an opportunity to follow this bear, which they were positive had been wounded, another crossed the path on the other side of them. Moffett drew his bow on him and this bear likewise rushed off into the woods and swamp.

At daybreak, the hunters secured the services of a guide and found the first bear dead, a short distance from where he had been seen crossing the path.

One arrow, identified as Sissler's, had gone into the bear's spine and the other arrow, Moffett's, had severed the jugular vein. Either arrow would have produced the fatal wound. The other bear they later discovered alive, but badly wounded and dragging his hind legs, having been shot through the spine and paralyzed. He was soon dispatched with another arrow. The arrow in the spine of the second bear, which brought him to earth, was from Moffett's bow. As far as is known this is the first time that bears have been successfully hunted and killed with a bow and arrow.

Alexandria Court Season To Get Under Way Tonight

Special to The Washington Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Dec. 2.—Alexandria's basket ball season will officially open Wednesday night in Armory Hall when the newly organized R. F. & P. All-Stars mix with the Naval Air Station Courtmen in their initial tussle at 8:20 o'clock.

Robert McDonald, manager of the railroaders, has signed the following players: Buddy Zimmerman, Eliet Cabell, Les McMenamin, Earl Cronin, and Bussey Brenner, all members of the Celtics in 1929, and Anderson, Grubbish, and Colliflower, three players from Washington.

33 Courtmen Report at Alexandria High.

The Railroaders will meet the Richmond Blues, Frederick Fado Five, Richmond Councillors and other fast teams in games this season. Manager McDonald is also arranging for several week-end trips.

The Central Athletic Club, a newly organized senior team in the Alexandria basket ball world, is after games. Manager Broaddus Carver can be reached by phoning Alexandria 2264, between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m. The Centrals will play all preliminary tussles to the Del Ray A. C.

Thirty-three candidates have reported to Coaches Given and Wilson, of the Alexandria High School Basket Ball team, for positions on the varsity squad. The "Twins" are now holding daily practices in armory hall.

It was announced that the Virginia Scholastics would open their court season on December 18 in Washington, opposing the crack Western High School Team. Three managers, James Moriarty, Malcolm Carr and Gaines Fritter, are handling all business arrangements for the season.

"Slim" Evans is the latest newcomer to the squad. He formerly played basket ball at Warsaw High School in Wisconsin. He is a 6-footer and is practically assured of the center berth. Evans attends George Mason High School.

Those bidding for berths follow: Gist, Embrey, Edwards, Backus, Janney, Hitt, Howard, Peterarilla, Travers, Luckett, Haywood, Jackson, Bruin, Good, Boran, Hudson, Routzhan, Schriener, Evans, Simms, Tiger, Randaudus, Knight, Hoeft, Gallagher, Mendelson, Trenary, Dixon, Moore, Parker, Penn and Suthard.

Capt. Tommy Lucas, of the St. Mary's Lyceum quint, tonight announced his team would entertain Western High School, of Washington, Friday night in their opening game in this city. The contest will be played in Armory Hall.

Raymond Heberlig, former Old Dominion Boat Club star, has been signed to coach the Del Ray Athletic Club tossers this season. Carroll Rush, former manager of the Knights, will serve as game manager. The Red Birds will hold their first practice in Armory Hall on Thursday night.

NEALE URGED AS WEST VA. COACH

Special to The Washington Post.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 2. West Virginia University Athletic Board of Control has announced that A. Earle (Greasy) Neale will be recommended to President J. R. Turner and the board of governors to succeed Ira E. Rodgers, resigned, as head coach of football and other university sports. Neale is expected to come on and have charge of the spring practice and to direct the football team in its efforts in the fall of 1931.

Neale, a product of Parkersburg, W. Va., High School and West Virginia Wesleyan College, began his coaching career on graduation from Wesleyan College in 1914, first working at Muskingum, Ohio, College, then back to his alma mater at Wesleyan, thence to Marietta Ohio, thence to Washington and Jefferson, and finally for six years at the University of Virginia at Charlottesville.

Neale Has Good College Coaching Record.

At all of these institutions, except possibly at Virginia, Neale set a new mark for gridiron success, his greatest achievement being seventeen successive victories over major opponents at W. and J., culminating in 1921 in the Red and Black going to the coast to play California a 0-0 tie in the Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena.

Along with his football coaching, Neale played major league baseball with the Cincinnati Reds for eight years, from 1916 to 1923, inclusive, being coach of the Reds in the latter year. He gave up professional baseball upon going to Virginia, but went back in 1929 to coach the St. Louis Cardinals, resigning then his post at Virginia and giving up football coaching for the past two seasons.

Neale's playing as well as coaching days have been marked by one sensational finish after another, and it is expected that his coming back to his native mountain State to coach the teams of its leading educational institution will mark a new and colorful era in the annals of her sport teams.

BIG SIX FOE SOUGHT BY PIXLEE

G.W. Coach to Attend Parley; Seeks Kansas or Missouri.

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY, through its athletic director, Jim Pixlee, is making efforts to schedule a prominent Western team in addition to Iowa, already lined up, for its 1931 football schedule. Pixlee departed last night for Kansas City where he will confer with coaches of Big Six Conference teams in annual meeting starting tomorrow and lasting until Saturday.

A graduate of Missouri University, member of the Big Six, and a former assistant coach at that institution, Pixlee has many friends and acquaintances among the athletic officials in the conference territory. He left here with high hopes of establishing relations with at least one of them.

Missouri or Kansas Seen As Best Bets.

It is believed likely that Pixlee will center his efforts on negotiating with Missouri and Kansas, although he will not pass up any chance of scheduling one of the other conference members, Nebraska, Kansas Aggies, Oklahoma and Iowa State.

The developments of the conference meeting may include complete expulsion of Kansas, in which event it is thought that the Kansas authorities, with the problem of filling a wide-open schedule on their hands, will welcome offers from prospective new opponents. Kansas is under fire for having used "Jarring Jim" Bausch, a player who was receiving a salary the year round from a business concern which he served actively during the summer months.

Pixlee is intent on arranging for 1931 the best football schedule in George Washington's history. He already has secured Iowa and Boston University as new foes and hopes to schedule one of the stronger Eastern teams to replace Navy.

G. W. Plans Trip to Iowa And Boston.

The Colonial eleven will visit Iowa City next year and will entertain the Hawkeyes here in 1931. The game with Boston University, never before scheduled by a G. W. team, will be played in Boston.

With an almost entire sophomore personnel, George Washington attained a .500 winning percentage for the 1930 season. It anticipates a stronger team next fall. Members of this year's freshmen squad are expected to strengthen the varsity.

TABS LISTING.

The Jacksonville (Fla.) Team is lining up a number of games for its spring schedule. The Tars have nine contests already arranged, including the Philadelphia Athletics on March 29, the St. Louis Cardinals on April 5, the New York Yankees on March 28, the Phillies on March 27, Toledo on March 30 and 31, and Columbus, of the American Association, on April 3 and 4.

COACH ARTIE BOYD, basket ball mentor of Tech, high school champions of Washington, gave notice yesterday that he is beginning to see an embryonic team in the maze of the 108 men who reported for basket ball practice, by naming the following 11 cagers as those who will receive special and extensive training in the immediate future. They are Capt. Russell, Beach, Wills, Willison, Johnson, Wheeler, Reed, Lewis, Johns, Bone and Reichardt.

It is probable that followers of Tech's basket team will view a different mode of offensive play this year. Coach Boyd put a team composed of Beach, Willison, Wheeler, Lewis and Bone through Pittsburgh's style of offense yesterday, and it seems likely that this system will remain at Tech.

Boyd first witnessed this style of play last winter when Pittsburgh's great team ran roughshod over Temple, one of the best teams in collegiate ranks.

Tech will continue the five-zone defense system originated by "Fog" Allen, Kansas' dean of football coaches and learned by Boyd while performing under the eye of Coach Burton Shipley at Maryland. Each man is assigned a given area of floor space and trained to regulate matters in his precinct consistent with the well-doing of his team.

Tech is going to have a small, fast team this year and will depend entirely on teamwork rather than on the potshot ability of any one performer. Team play and speed will be stressed.

JOE FITZGERALD, regarded as the most capable basket ball referee ever developed in Washington, died yesterday morning at the Naval Hospital after four years of semi-invalidism brought on by a paralytic stroke which seized him in the midst of the 1927 basket ball season. He was 34 years old.

While the first stroke in 1927 placed him critically near death, his recovery after a convalescence of a year was marked. His improvement continued throughout 1929 so that it was possible for him to dispense with his cane. He again reported regularly at his position in the Government Printing Office and was able to drive his automobile.

He was stricken by a third and fatal paralytic stroke late in the summer and was removed to Naval Hospital.

Fitzgerald was a product of Gonzaga High School and Georgetown University. He played little basket ball while at either school but developed into one of the game's keenest students.

His first refereeing was for Gonzaga High in 1920. His merit as a court official was soon recognized. He became the arbitrator in the tilts between the two great rivals of the time, the Aloysius Club and the Yankees. In a short time he was the most sought after official in the city and suburbs. His long list of engagements were directly responsible for his first paralytic stroke.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary Margaret Fitzgerald, of 3811 Tenth street northwest, his sister, Miss Mary C. Fitzgerald, and his two brothers, Aloysius and Leo.

ALCOVA VS. SEAT PLEASANT

To settle a dispute between the teams arising out of last Sunday's 6-6 tie the Alcovas and the Seat Pleasants will meet Sunday at 2 o'clock at Boyd Stadium in what promises to be a real grid battle.

The Seat Pleasants will be "padded" with certain stars from the Mercuries and other clubs.

SOUTH LISTS OUTSIDE FOES

By DILLON GRAHAM.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 2 (A.P.).—The end of the gridiron season finds schedule makers jockeying for position on the 1931 slates of the major Dixie teams. Indications are that intersectional skirmishes will take an even higher spot than before and there will be more intraconference engagements.

Information from Baton Rouge is that Louisiana State will play two outside foes—the Army and Texas Christian University. Russ Cohen has just signed a new three-year contract and will direct the Tigers through the schedule which also includes five conference games.

Kentucky gets ambitious with an eight-game conference slate. The Wildcats play Clemson, Washington and Lee, Maryland, V. P. I., Alabama, Duke, V. M. I. and Tennessee.

Georgia goes North twice to play Yale and New York University. Alabama is missing from the Georgia schedule.

Information from Nashville says Vanderbilt is to play Tulane and Alabama, conference cochampions, and probably five other conference teams, including Maryland and North Carolina. Ohio State will replace Minnesota as the Commodores' intersectional opponent.

Alabama has another eight-game conference hook-up to work on. The Crimsons play Mississippi, Tennessee, Sewanee, Mississippi A. & M., Kentucky, Florida, Clemson and Vanderbilt.

Florida is reported to have Syracuse for its intersectional opponent instead of Chicago. Reports from Chapel Hill are that North Carolina is negotiating for a game with Florida.

Maryland Off Yale's Grid Schedule.

After several years of play Duke is off Navy's schedule and Maryland does not play Yale. Georgia Tech is to play Carnegie Tech and Pennsylvania again.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 2.—Raymond Updegrove, local hunter, has maintained a record, established since the first season he went hunting, getting his deer or bear on the first day out. For four years now, Updegrove has brought down a deer or a bear on the first day. Yesterday he brought down a six-prong buck on the first shot while hunting in Adams County, Pa. Last year he brought in a big buck and the two previous years he got bears on the first day of the hunting season.

STOCKS AND GRAINS CONTINUE TO CLIMB

U. S. STEEL GAINS 2⅝

New York, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Stock, bond and grain quotations ventured higher today coincident with the President's message to Congress, a better tone to the copper market and future vague reports that better steel prices were in the making.

The chief topic of the day, inevitably, was Mr. Hoover's address to Congress. His references to the antitrust laws and his suggestion for an inquiry into their economic effects upon certain industries, such as coal and oil, that deal with the country's natural resources, were read attentively in financial circles which believe a revision of the laws would help solve some current problems.

But the stock market seemed to have discounted largely the remarks on railroad consolidation, the capital tax, interstate transmission of electrical power and the estimated Treasury deficit, so that publication of extracts of the message on the financial news tickers accelerated only moderately a narrow advance that had been under way for an hour. There was, in fact, some selling thereafter, but when half of the 1 to 2 point gains had been lost the rise was resumed under the auspices of the steel shares.

Report on Steel Prices.

The report concerning steel prices had been heard off and on during recent weeks. It forecasts an advance, probably for the next quarter, in quotations on bars, shapes and plates, a move which would indicate considerable confidence in the industry's prospects over the next few months.

More definite was the improvement in copper, which was sold by customs smelters at 11½ cents, an advance of half a cent. With no metal available below that figure, the large producers continued to hold at 12 cents, the price at which efforts are being made to stabilize the metal.

Although stock prices advanced during the latter half of November, the collateral loans of New York Stock Exchange member firms dropped $393,875,085 last month to a new low. This decline was smaller than the shrinkage in Federal Reserve brokers' loans for the same period, but the latter borrowings are less inclusive than the so-called "street loans." Wall street, however, has no worries as to the position of speculative credit, and would probably welcome a turn in the other direction.

Mack Truck Off 4 Points.

The market met a minor interruption to the upward trend in the forenoon when selling of Mack Truck, which broke 4 points, unsettled parts of the list. Announcement of the dividend reduction on that stock was followed by prompt covering by shorts who apparently had expected a larger cut, and general prices again picked up the thread of the advance. Declaration of the regular dividend on Youngstown Sheet & Tube was reassuring. Incidentally, the issue closed 5 points net higher.

U. S. Steel, with a gain of 2⅝, was a feature of the day. There was net improvement of about a point in Bethlehem, Vanadium, McKeesport, Republic and Otis, among the steels, but only fractional gains in General Electric, Westinghouse, General Motors, American Telephone, Radio and North American. Johns Manville and Allied Chemical rose 2.

There was late strength in the foods, with advances of a point or more in National Biscuit, Borden, Coca Cola, Standard Brands and others. Rails were irregular, but coppers averaged about a point higher.

1,579,620 Shares Traded.

Wheat, closing ¾ to 1⅜ cents higher, was strengthened by a decrease in the world's visible supply and by better export sales of Canadian grain. Corn's gains ranged from 2 to 2¾ cents, reflecting prospects of smaller receipts, unfavorable weather and a small increase in contract stock. Rye was also strong, rallying about 3 cents, while cotton closed 13 to 17 points higher.

Sterling cables, after opening not far from the point at which gold might be exported from New York, rallied rather sharply. Other foreign currencies were generally improved.

BOND SALES RULED BY STABLE TREND

High-Grade Domestics Move Up Slightly; Treasury Group Mixed.

FOREIGN ISSUES SCORE

New York, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Stability returned to the bond market today. The further improvement in the share market tended to check urgent selling that has been a disturbing factor of late, and bonds more accurately reflected the favorable conditions in the money market than they have in some time.

While the better tone developed in a quiet session, high grade domestic bonds that normally respond to easy money rates were slightly higher as a rule. Second grade bonds were mixed but some sizable recoveries were made by issues that have been sharply depressed. Rails were much steadier.

Treasury Sales Dwindle.

The turnover in United States Governments dwindle to small proportions from the peak of activity reached yesterday. Mixed trends prevailed. Liberty 3½s, and Liberty 1st, 4¼s climbed to within a small fraction of their year's highs, while short term Treasury issues declined further. Treasury 4¼s sagged ⅛. The sharp advance in Governments in recent weeks probably has influenced some liquidation by banks, holdings of Governments by Federal Reserve member banks declined $12,000,000 in the week ended November 26.

A moderate inquiry for certain South American and European bonds gave the foreign list a firm appearance. Colombian 6s, Bolivian 7s, Peru first and second 6s, Rio de Janeiro 8s, Rio Grande do Sul 6s, and Sao Paulo 8s were among the principal Latin-Americans to share in the improvement. German governments, municipals and industrials, were firmed and very active. German International 5½s advanced ¾. The Agricultural Bank 6s of 1938, were up a point and similar gains were registered by several others.

Seaboard Issues Rise.

In the railroad section improvement was most marked in Boston & Maine 5s, Denver, Rio Grande & Western 5s, Erie 5s of 1975, Illinois Central 4s and first 3½s, Nickel Plate 4½s C, Pennsylvania general 4½s, Frisco bonds, St. Louis Southwestern 5s, and Southern Railway 5s. Seaboard issues, Wabash 5s B, New York, Sussex & Western 5s, Missouri Pacific general 5s, International Great Northern 6s, Chicago & Northwestern issues continued their decline.

A 5-point advance in Warner Brothers 6s in very active trading was a feature of stock privilege issues, which made an irregular recovery. The issue closed at 72, compared with its recent low of 66½. Baltimore & Ohio 4½s, and Alleghany 5s of 1949, gained a point each. Bonds with warrants were generally soft.

ANDREWS ADOPTS RETIREMENT PLAN

EMPLOYES FAVOR IDEA

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

R. P. Andrews, president of the R. P. Andrews Paper Co., of this city, has announced adoption of a cooperative retirement program as another step toward completion of the company's industrial relations plan. This step, taken during the present depression, indicates the company's desire to assure its employes, and its unanimous acceptance by eligible employes shows their appreciation.

Approximately $100,000 of group life insurance is now in force on these and with the insured annuities they are now protected against dependent old age. All employes actively engaged December 31, date the plan is effective, will be eligible to participate in annuity benefits. Like the original, the additional coverage is being underwritten by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and features the cooperative method of paying premiums, whereby employer and employes jointly share the cost.

The amount of the pension to be paid will be determined by an employe's earnings and will become payable at the age of 65. The amount will be equivalent to approximately 1½ per cent of future earnings. While the normal retirement age has been fixed at 65, an employe can retire at an earlier or later age with a corresponding decrease or increase of the annuity.

Other Features of Plan.

Other features of the general plan include the advantages of a staff of visiting nurses, whose services are supplemented by a health advisory bureau. Included in the latter's functions is the regular distribution of pamphlets on disease prevention and health conservation.

Bertram Chesterman, president, Morris Plan Bank of Washington, has written an article on industrial banking in the November issue of the United States Investor. Mr. Chesterman has a national reputation and is considered an authority on this particular phase of the banking business. Before coming to Washington, he was one of the executive officers of the Industrial Finance Corporation of New York, which owns large blocks of stock in Morris Plan banks all over the country, and his particular duties with that corporation were counseling Morris Plan banks throughout the country as to how to improve their operations.

Before becoming associated with Morris Plan institutions, Mr. Chesterman was national bank examiner for the Federal Government, examining national banks in New York City, and prior to his appointment as such, was connected with the banking department of Virginia, his assignments being generally to examine trust companies. Mr. Chesterman also took an important part in procuring the enactment of legislation which established the banking department in Virginia and drafted a very substantial portion of the first banking statutes adopted by that State in 1910, so that his banking experience has covered practically all fields.

Article Considered Timely.

The article which he has written for the United States Investor answers some of the practical problems with respect to the particular field known as industrial banking. Mr. Chesterman became associated with the Morris Plan Bank of Washington at its inception and was shortly thereafter appointed president. Under his administration the local bank has proved to be one of the most successful Morris Plan banks in the country.

Committee appointments announced yesterday by C. T. Williams, Baltimore, chairman, Southeastern group Investment Bankers Association of America, include the following local men: Paul V. Keyser, legislation committee; Eugene E. Thompson (Crane, Parris & Co.), business conduct; Thomas C. Montgomery (Waggaman, Brawner & Co., Inc.), fraudulent advertising.

Although only one custom smelter sold the metal at 11½ cents, the trade reported that there was no copper available under that level. The one-half cent increase represented two advances of one-quarter of a cent each by custom smelters today, as some metal was sold at 11¼ cents shortly after the opening of business. Meanwhile the larger producers were continuing to hold their copper at 12 cents a pound and making sales abroad through Copper Exporters, Inc., which continues to quote 12.30 cents a pound, c. i. f. European base ports. Foreign sales this morning were estimated roughly at 1,750,000 pounds, while 2,250,000 pounds were sold abroad yesterday.

A belief that the textile industry has reached its low point and that general business activity will not show any serious cyclical declines below the October levels is expressed in the Textile Economist, publication of the research division of Tubize Chatillon Corporation "in general," the Economist says, "the spirit of extreme pessimism which appeared as a result of the failure of business to revive this fall, is turning to cautious optimism the formation of large scale relief organizations throughout the country not only argues well for a continued and even an increased purchasing power especially for necessaries, but also engenders among business leaders a spirit of cooperation which, in turn, is reflected in optimism relative to their own outlook."

L. W. He said new industries located along the lines in October have an estimated promised business of 3,065 cars annually. Heavy rains have held back the loading of citrus and perishable vegetables, he said, and added that an increase of approximately 5,000 carloads is anticipated for the shipping season, which is just beginning in the lower valley.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

Columbia Gas.

R. K. J.—I am seriously considering buying Columbia Gas, but would like some information regarding the stock before doing so.

Answer—The $2 annual dividend requirements were not fully covered in the twelve months ended September 30. The stock, however, is considered an attractive speculative investment issue for long-term holding. Smaller earnings this year are attributed to curtailed industrial consumption of gas and electric power and smaller use of domestic gas in the territory served.

Another factor was the increased operating expenses in the gas division brought about by plans to expand future business, which will consist of supplying natural gas at wholesale to companies serving Washington, D. C., and York, Pa. A line from the system in southern Pennsylvania to Washington will be completed soon and the potentialities of the extension of Columbia's system to the large industrial and domestic markets of the Eastern seaboard make the stock attractive.

Curtiss-Wright; Consolidated Film.

Answer—Advice is never here given relative to speculative market commitments. Curtiss-Wright common, as a nondividend payer is an out-and-out speculation, and as such is not considered at all worthy of the employment of investment funds. Consolidated Film industry, paying $2 annually in dividends, and with earnings for nine months ended September 30 last more than ample to take care of the full year's disbursement on the common, has some little investment appeal, though, at the same time, being quite speculative. In consideration of the fact that at present prices the stock yields to the investor better than 14 per cent, and it is now selling at approximately the figure you paid for it, there is no apparent reason why you should worry about your holdings of that issue.

Associated Gas & Electric.

I. D. H.—I would like to have your opinion concerning Associated Gas & Electric class A stock. Would appreciate your opinion as to whether I should hold this stock or exchange a part or all of my holdings for the new series of $4 cumulative preference stock that has been offered in exchange?

Answer—This column never advises in matters of this kind, as a determination must be left entirely to the judgment of the individual. Associated Gas & Electric A is well thought of for the long pull, even though it is not to be classified as a high-grade investment. In last two calendar years cash dividends have been amply covered, earnings for class A in 1929 amounting to $3.46 and in 1928 to $4.31. The yield on the investment at present prices is very substantial and the stock, therefore, possesses considerable attraction from a speculative-investment viewpoint. What particular advantage would be gained through making the proposed exchange is not apparent.

Corporate Trust Shares.

R. D. C.—Will you please tell me what you think c. Corporate Trust shares as an investment?

Answer—The shares appear to be a safe investment. They represent a fixed common stock investment in 28 basic industries of America. Total cash distributions the past eighteen months amounted to $3.28 per share, largest payment per share for the period of any fixed trust.

MONTGOMERY BOARD CHOOSES OFFICERS

BACK CHILD WELFARE

Lacy Shaw, "baby" member of the new Montgomery County Board of Commissioners, was elected its president yesterday at the board's organization meeting in the courthouse at Rockville. Commissioner Shaw was reelected in November.

Berry E. Clark, chairman of the Democratic State central committee for Montgomery County, was reelected clerk of the board. This is his eleventh appointment as a clerk in the courthouse. He was clerk to the county treasurer, and for twelve years thereafter he was clerk to the county commissioners. He was county treasurer also.

Alton C. Bell, William W. Welsh, Mrs. Mary W. O'Brien and Mrs. Lucille Mullineaux were appointed assistant clerks. Capt. Joseph C. Cissell was reappointed counsel to the commissioners.

The commissioners, in the order of their districts, are: Downey M. Williams, Sherwood Duvall, Clagett C. Hilton, William F. Ricketts, Lacy Shaw, all reelected; John B. Diamond and Robert D. Hagner.

This is the first time there have been seven on the board. The last Legislature divided the county into seven commissioner districts, adding two. This was done that the rapidly increasing population could get better service.

The board authorized advertisement for bids to demolish the old Farmers Banking & Trust Co. Building and the Clifford H. Robertson office, the only remaining buildings on the site of the new courthouse. The bank has moved to spacious quarters in a new building. Robertson has leased offices in the bank building.

Judge A. L. Wilson, of the Takoma Park Police Court, reported to the commissioners he collected fines and costs amounting to $16.50 in November.

Mrs. William McBain, of Gaithersburg, was reelected president; James Cunningham Rogers, of Chevy Chase, vice president, and Mrs. J. Somervell Dawson, of Rockville, secretary-treasurer, at a meeting of the Montgomery County Council of Home and School Associations held in the Rockville High School. The meeting was attended by representatives of the 42 constituent bodies.

O. W. Anderson, county farm agent; Miss Blanche A. Corwin, county home demonstration agent; Miss Margaret Ansdell, Red Cross nutritionist; Miss Irene Shields, director of the Montgomery County Social Service League, and Miss Hermine Badenhoop, county nurse, spoke on phases of their work.

A motion of Edwin W. Broome, county superintendent of schools, that certain principles adopted by the White House Conference on Child Welfare be printed in pamphlet form and distributed to parents of school children, was adopted. The Rev. Henry K. Pasma, pastor of the Rockville Presbyterian Church, opened the meeting with prayer. Singing was led by Mrs. Helen Bickmore, teacher of music at the Gaithersburg High School, and a solo was sung by Arthur C. Braedy, of Silver Spring. Miss Louise Reynolds, of Bethesda, accompanied on the piano.

A committee of the Cabin John Park Citizens Association is studying two proposals offered by Emory H. Bogley on possible hook-up of the town with the county sanitary system. Mr. Bogley, a member of the commission, said the town could pay for the laying of sewer and water mains and service or special legislation could be obtained to permit the town's inclusion in the sanitary area.

In the latter event, a 7-cent Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission tax would be levied on all property in Cabin John Park. The town has been eager to get Washington suburban service, says W. B. Armstrong, chairman of the committee in charge of making a survey of the possibilities. He contends installation of fireplugs would reduce the fire insurance rate about 35 per cent.

The association also has a move on foot to form a Conduit road committee, which would have representatives from the six civic bodies along that thoroughfare and could make possible united effort on matters pertaining to the area adjacent to the road. The other agencies are: Glen Echo Heights, Mohican Hills, Glen Echo, Md., Citizens Associations and the town of Glen Echo. The association adopted a resolution which would bar hunting in the metropolitan area of the county and provide a dog catcher and pound.

DANVILLE STRIKERS TO RESUME PICKETS

REGIMENT IS REDUCED

Danville, Va., Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Striking union employes of the Dan River Mill laid plans today for reestablishing organized picketing in the Schoolfield area which is under military patrol.

Resumption of regular picket duty, abandoned for a number of days during which only a casual grouping of strikers took place near the mill, will be undertaken tomorrow morning on a reorganized basis in conformity with regulations from county authorities. Pickets abandoned their posts today, but labor officials tonight pointed out that this was not the result of official action, since only unorganized picket men were on duty.

Reorganization of the pickets comes after a conference between Col. H. L. Ople, commanding the National Guard at Schoolfield, and C. L. Anderson, picket captain of the striking textile workers. Col. Ople said he received assurances of cooperating from Mr. Anderson in the matter of the pickets conforming to revised regulations limiting numbers and activities of the pickets.

National Guard squads, detailed from a regiment reduced today by two companies leaving for their homes tonight, continue to pace about the mill in Schoolfield, scene last week of disorders incident to the strike. The two companies leaving today were the Howitzer Company of Emporia and Machine Gun Company D of Roanoke. Machine Gun Company H was returned last week to Martinsville. Military authorities said today they had received no reports of any disorders.

Col. Opie was visited today by Lindsey Lee Moore, cattle breeder, of Pittsylvania County, who some time this week will receive orders to take charge of organizing and directing a special county police force, to operate until the termination of the strike. Mr. Moore was recommended as commissioner of county police by the Pittsylvania Board of Supervisors and will be appointed by Judge Turner Clement, of circuit court, within the next few days. The special detail, to be organized from the present police forces of the county will operate independently of the sheriff's office.

It was concluded that a revolver was accidentally discharged as he was taking it from a drawer. The victim leaves a family.

NEW WELL ASSISTS IN ARID MARYLAND

ADDED UNIT CONSIDERED

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Dec. 2.—Officials of the State Board of Health, municipal authorities and officials of the Naval Academy gathered at the Annapolis Water Co.'s plant near the city today and watched the new pump placed in operatoin over a recently completed artesian well.

The well is expected to permanently relieve the water shortage which has gripped the city since early last spring. There were times when the population here did not know whether it would have water for drinking or bathing. But for the fact that the United States Naval Academy pumped 250,000 gallons daily from its wells into city mains, the drought would have placed the city in a serious predicament.

As the new pump, which will produce approximately 1,000 gallons per minute, was put into action, Dr. Fred W. Caspari, of the State Board of Health; Mayor Walter E. Queenstedt of Annapolis, T. Roland Brown, president of the water company; Rear Admiral Samuel S. Robison, superintendent of the Naval Academy; his aid, Commander Donald B. Beary, were among the onlookers.

Dr. Caspari, addressing the group, said that the first test of the water from the well showed it to be in excellent condition, containing but 6 parts iron per 1,000 gallons. He pointed out that the water at the Naval Academy, which is considered so good that many residents of the city make daily trips, carrying it away in jugs, contains 80 parts iron per 1,000 gallons. When the water clears up it may have a still lower percentage of iron, Dr. Caspari said.

While the pump has been placed in operation the flow will not be turned into the supply basin of the reservoir for several days yet. Considerable mud is being sucked up by the first pressure.

Within half an hour after the pump had been started it was producing 900 gallons per minute, which will carry the total daily supply well beyond the guaranteed 1,000,000 gallons.

"The city is pleased with the new water unit and I hope the city council will approve sinking another such well for $10,000 to doubly assure an all-time supply, when it meets Monday," Mayor Quenstedt said. The new well cost 15,000, but with the equipment already here, the contracting firm has offered to sink a second well at a saving of one-third to the city.

Illness Holds Up Trial of Lawyer

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 2.—Prosecution of Allen N. Noll, a former prosecuting attorney for this county, on a charge of extortion, was continued indefinitely here today, when Judge D. H. Rodgers granted a continuance. In an affidavit, Dr. James A. Duff, of this city, said Noll suffers from paresis, and is unable to differentiate between right and wrong, and would be incapable of appreciating the seriousness of the charge.

Continuances were granted also in similar cases against three other Martinsburg persons indicted with Noll—Miss Lucille Rind, secretary to Noll; E. M. Rinker, a private detective, formerly a Federal prohibition agent in this State, and Mrs. Kate Smith.

By agreement, Noll will enter a sanatorium for treatment under the jurisdiction of the court. The other defendants will give bond for appearance at trial in the February term. If Noll recovers by that time he will be tried; if not, the case will be continued again.

FAIRFAX CONTRACTS FOR WATER SYSTEM

LEGAL DELAY OBVIATED

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone: Clarendon 2324-W-2.

The new municipal water system for the town of Fairfax will be installed by the McGrary Engineering Co., of Atlanta, Ga., according to the contract signed at the meeting of the Fairfax town council. The McGrary bid was approximately $45,000, if centrifugal pipe is used, or approximately $1,000 more for sand cast pipe. The council decided on centrifugal pipe, which is similar to that used in the Arlington County water system.

The bid accepted by the council was for the installation and supervision of laying the mains. The town itself is to buy all of the materials, the price of which was included in the McGrary bids. The bids for material, which are to be passed upon by the council, will be advertised for immediately and will be opened in about two weeks, according to Mayor Thomas P. Chapman.

The contract for digging two 8-inch wells on the tract purchased from Mrs. Nora V. Allison on Payne street was awarded to Fred N. Hagman, jr., of Vienna, at a price of $3.85 per foot. These wells will be approximately 200 feet deep each, which is believed will furnish a flow of water averaging 50 gallons per minute from each well. Hagman plans to move his machinery to the site and start work this week.

The contract price for the land purchased from Mrs. Allison is $1,250, but as one of Mrs. Allison's daughters is a minor, suit must be instituted for the town to gain legal possession of the property. However, this will not delay the work, which will proceed immediately under contract. The opposition voiced by adjoining property owners, who threatened court action if the tanks and other equipment were erected on the lot, has been withdrawn.

Mayor Chapman stated last night that the council did not have time at its regular meeting to discuss the questions concerning the issuance of the $50,000 municipal water bonds which were authorized by the citizens at a special election last month, but this phase of the problem will be taken up at a special meeting which is to be held within the next few days. The town contract with the McCrary Co. has been checked by Attorneys Thomas R. Keith and John W. Rust, of Fairfax, and the plans for the installation were gone over by C. L. Kinnier, county engineer of Arlington County, a former resident of the town of Fairfax. Fairfax County Engineer F. N. Larkin has stated that he has never submitted any bids for installing this water system with county forces, as the county is not in the contracting business, but he is willing to cooperate with the town authorities in the work. The only reason for calling on county assistance would be in case suitable outside bids could not be obtained.

FOREIGN EMBARGO ON APPLES FEARED

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 2.—"If our Government continues its policy of excluding foreign commodities we may look for further interference with our export business," declared Thomas B. Byrd, of Winchester, as president of the Virginia Horticultural Society and one of the largest growers of apples in the Middle Atlantic States, in his annual address to that body tonight. Nearly 300 growers and agriculturists are in attendance at the society's thirty-fifth annual convention here.

"The underlying cause of all these restrictions is our Government's policy in regard to tariffs and especially in regard to embargoes on foreign fruits, vegetables and plants. Each season demonstrates more clearly that the prosperity of our Virginia industry is based on our foreign trade. If that outlet were denied us, we could not operate with a profit. This society has done everything possible to keep the doors of foreign trade open, and, together with other agencies, was instrumental in having the Argentine embargo postponed to allow this season's crop to enter that country."

Commenting on washing machines, used for the first time in Virginia this year, Mr. Byrd said he was convinced that washing improves the appearance of the fruit and that the machines have come to stay. Despite the perplexing difficulties encountered during the season, he expressed the belief that the Virginia apple industry has emerged in better condition than that of any other section with the possible exception of northern New York.

ANNAPOLIS YEGGS LOOT POSTOFFICE

LOSS MOSTLY IN STAMPS

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Dec. 2.—Yeggmen blew the safe in the postoffice here early today and escaped with stamps and money estimated at $10,000.

Acetylene tanks and nitroglycerin were left in the building by the safeblowers, who had entered through a window they had jimmied. The robbery is believed to have taken place between midnight and 3 a. m. The light usually kept burning was out during that period.

J. Kent Worthington, a clerk, discovered that the safe had been looted when he started work at 5:30 o'clock Postoffice Inspector Harry L. Connor, of Washington, was notified and came here to investigate the robbery.

Marks made by the jimmy on the window sill were visible. Acetylene torches had been used to open the thick outer door of the safe. A heavy bar connected with the inside lock had been melted off.

After going through the outer door, the yeggmen blew the lock of an inner door by use of nitroglycerin. Inside the vault was the main safe, protected by a burglar alarm. No attempt was made to force this open. Four small compartments, containing stamps and cash and used by different clerks, were opened by the torch and one by the use of a key.

It was from these that the robbers obtained their loot. Each of the clerks keeps an individual record of the cash and stamps in his compartment. The robbers got mostly one-cent and two-cent stamps.

THE ONCE OVER

THE SPEECH AND THE PERSONALITY.

DEAR F-34:

You are just the man I am looking for. I have never been able to make a good speech. Every time I have tried to say a few fitting words at the Elks banquet, the annual dinner of the Woodmen of the World or the testimonial dinner to Joe Doakes I have been a complete bust. I never could explain it. I would have a good speech prepared and everything, with a "that reminds me of a story" inserted here and there and with the customary proportion of wisecracks, but it would just fall flat.

• • • •

To begin with, I used to write my own speeches. Later I tried paying expert speech writers to write them for me, but they were worse than the ones I composed myself. Now it just dawns on me, after reading your advertisement, what the trouble has been: my speeches have never fitted my personality!

• • • •

They have been misfits. They have been baggy at the knees and loose under the arms. Come to think of it, I never have felt comfortable in my speeches. I have had the feeling I didn't look right in them. And now I realize it was all too true—they were made for some other fellow.

• • • •

Now what I want to get is a speech that will be a swell fit for my personality. I am going to make a speech at a bachelor dinner to a man named Igginwipt next week. There will be fifteen other speakers and while I will come near the end, when everybody will be in such shape that they won't know or care whether my speech is a fit or not, I am anxious to get one that will be made to measure and without any wrinkles anywhere.

• • • •

I will probably have to come over for a fitting, but I will give you a few facts on which you can get started. I am 5 feet 11 inches in height in my stockinged feet, weigh 185 pounds and have light hair and blue eyes. I have a strong nose, but a weak chin and I wear a slight sandy mustache that looks something like the rope that used to come around bundle-wood.

I am told I have a dreamy expression, and all I can tell you about my personality is that I have an inferiority complex, am flustered in the presence of strong women, am self-conscious facing any audience and have a tendency to sit around staring into space.

• • • •

I suppose you have speeches in stock for men 5 feet 11 inches, with blue eyes, but you will also have to consider the mustache, the self-consciousness and what I told you about being shy with women. Maybe you can take a speech made for a 5-foot-11-inch man and combine it with a speech designed for a 185-pound speaker with an inferiority complex.

• • • •

But I guess I will have to come over and try the speech on a couple of times and have you make alterations as we go along. Anyhow, I am sure that I am now on the right track and will yet get up at a banquet without putting everybody to sleep.

Hoping to hear from you soon, I am
Yours sincerely,
